Work begins on development at Tiffany lane

Within a month construction is expected to begin on the first of seven housing units on the site of the old Eastern Felt Company across from the Noonan School.

Utilities and their hook-ups are in place now in what will be the Tiffany lane development, and by Monday curbing should be delivered to the site.

The development of six duplex and one single unit is the joint venture of Robert W. Smith of Cambridge and Winchester realtor Sherman Josephson and his brother Roy. Five years ago Josephson bought the felt company land on speculation and sold it to Smith. Smith tore down the abandoned factory and now the three men are completing their project.

Josephson said that although the work is just 70 percent completed, his real estate office has already received about 30 calls inquiring about buying land and houses on Tiffany lane.

The endeavor has not been without its ups and downs. In April of 1975, the planning board gave approval to the plans contingent on their meeting on conservation commission standards. The land falls within 100 feet of the Horn Pond brook and certain requirements are mandated by the Hatch-Wetlands Protection Act.

Among the requirements, the conservation commission asked that rocks be placed along the banks of Horn Pond brook to halt the erosion into the brook.

Utility hook-ups are in and curbing should be installed next week at the new Tiffany lane development site off Canal street. The project, under the direction of Robert W. Smith of Cambridge and Winchester realtor Sherman Josephson and his brother Roy, will feature one single and six duplex housing units on the site of the Eastern Felt Company along Horn Pond brook.

On August 7, 1975, the conservation commission held a public hearing and told the planning board of its concerns about the project. On September 2, the conditions of approval from the CC were received by the planning board. Town Engineer John Garcia said then that the plans would be altered accordingly to conform with the CC conditions. Finally on October 6, the plans, which had already been changed once by the designer for other reasons, were given planning board approval.

So now construction is progressing at the site. Sometime this summer the first houses should be up.

Charter violation

DPW workers protest foremen salary 'cuts'

There may be trouble brewing down at the department of public works.

Four foremen in the DPW received letters last week informing them that their jobs were being reclassified from "regular foreman" to "working foreman." These changes were accompanied by pay cuts, from a W14 to a W13 level, according to a negotiator for the employees' union.

The apparent cut may be in violation of the Town Charter, which reads, "No person in the permanent full-time service or employment of the town shall forfeit his pay grade or time in service." The provision comes under Section 8-3, Continuation of Personnel.

Town Manager Thomas Groux feels there has been no violation. "We didn't cut any salaries," he says. "It's a matter of interpretation."

Groux said that "the individuals involved had been making a maximum of $6.07 an hour last year under the W14 scale, which has been raised this year to $6.37." According to Groux, the W13 scale has also gone up, to a maximum of $6.12. "The men are not making any less than they made before," Groux said, "since most are on maximum."

The town manager went on to add that had any employee been moved to a position with a W12 pay scale, which has a maximum of $5.70, "that employee would have stayed at $6.07, because that was his pay rate before the reorganization."

Public works employees first complained to the town manager about the matter at a grievance meeting last Friday. This particular issue had not been filed as a formal grievance and therefore was not on the meeting agenda. However, Groux told the employees they could file a formal grievance on the matter.

At least six other DPW employees have faced similar pay 'cuts' according to town meeting member Clara Hewis, who said the employees had been in touch with her about the alleged cuts. The union negotiator, who asked that his name not be used, "because I don't want to get Shanghai'd," said the other cuts had been made in the incinerator crew when that facility was revamped into the transfer station.

The negotiator said incinerator crew members had been receiving a W12 salary while the incinerator was still in operation. "All but seven or eight of them are on W10 now," he said.

This latter group has not filed any grievance, according to the negotiator, for fear of reprisals from the town manager. "One guy squawked, and they shipped him over to the cemetery department," said the negotiator.

Groux said the transfer of incinerator employees "had nothing to do with reorganization" but arose out of the change in the nature of the operations at the town dump. He said the previous crew of 12 men had been reduced to seven men, "with different titles and duties."

The employees negotiating team has been of the understanding that "nobody was a taking a cut in pay." Of the latest supposed pay cut to the foremen, a negotiator said, "They didn't give us an explanation." The foremen have been encouraged to file a grievance "pretty quick," the negotiator said.

'A big job to be done...'

Asst. Supt. Perry retiring; sees problems ahead for schools

During 13 years of handling personnel for the Winchester School System, Henry Perry has seen the ups and downs.

His term here, first as personnel director, later as assistant superintendent for personnel, began in 1964, when the school system was expanding to adapt to rising enrollments and new educational ideas. In the peak expansion year, 98 new staff members were hired.

With his retirement this year, the elimination of Perry's position epitomizes how far the system has turned around. Declining enrollments and budgetary constraints have led to a reduction in positions and in hiring; last year only 25 new professional personnel were hired.

"I enjoy the expansion period more than the contraction period," Perry states flatly. Reduction in force is tough, especially if you have some feeling for people."

And one thing Henry Perry's career has given him is a feeling for people.

Glancing around his office up at Sanborn House, one gets the impression his relationships with the professional staff in Winchester's schools are more than "strictly business." A blockprint on one wall, a Nantucket harbor scene, was done by high school art teacher Thomas Tracy. Two lithographs which decorate the walls are from a former art teacher.

Up on the mantle piece sits an old photograph of Perry's father, who was a school superintendent in Leominster. The photo shows him sitting upright, posed formally for the camera. The physical resemblance is easy to see. And the influence obviously goes further. Of his father the superintendent, Perry says, "If I do say so, he was an outstanding one."

Perry, now 60, grew up in Leominster, attending the public schools there. In 1939, two years after his father died, he earned a BA in history from Clark University. With understated tone, Perry recalls, "Thirty-nine was not a good year." He wanted to attend law school, but the money wasn't there. He decided to try teaching.

Back then, one didn't need certification to teach, which was fortunate since Perry had no experience teaching. He canvassed all over New England for a job and wound up working as a salesman for a year.

In 1940 he got his break. A woman teaching in a Leominster junior high school went on leave, and Perry took over the post at a salary of $1000. After two years he moved to the high school, where he remained teaching until the fall of 1947 (33 months of that time was taken up in the service during World War II).

For the next two years Perry shifted out of the classroom, serving as director of guidance in Sanford, Me. Graduate work at Boston University filled out this period, leading to another degree. His studies eventually took him into counseling and administration; though he completed course requirements for a doctorate, he never got around to writing the dissertation.

The study at BU led Perry back down to Boston in the summer of 1949 to become the school's educational placement officer, a post he held for 15 years.

"I had a very happy experience at BU," says Perry, who was responsible for helping find jobs for teachers, professors, superintendents and other school personnel. At that time there was "a great opportunity" to come into contact with school systems across the country; there were plenty of jobs opening up in the 1950s and 1960s.

One of those jobs was in Winchester, and when the notice seeking a personnel director came across Henry Perry's desk at BU, he took a close look. It was a new position — during 1963-4, the town employed the consulting firm of Booz, Allen & Hamilton, Inc. to study personnel practices in the school system. The firm concluded that Winchester should immediately hire a director of personnel.

In a good position to examine available jobs around the country, Perry was picky. "It took 5 years to place myself," he laughs. He was looking for advancement, and the location, salary and responsibilities were appealing, so he applied and got the job, starting in August, 1964.

Interestingly enough, another recommendation from the consultants was for an assistant superintendent for curriculum. Walter Gleason, who was just completing his doctorate at BU, wandered into Perry's office at BU looking for a job, and Perry recommended Gleason back to Winchester. Gleason was a principal in Weston at the time.)

After 13 years, there will no longer be a director of personnel (Perry's position was later changed to an assistant superintendency by the school board). Perry's duties are to be taken over by the remaining central office staff.

"Obviously I feel it is a mistake for the town to think they don't need a full time person for personnel," Perry says. Noting that Winchester's attitudes are not dissimilar from those in many communities nationwide, Perry explains, "I'm concerned about the community's attitude toward support for public education." Though he sympathizes with the "taxpayer revolt" against rising taxes, Perry worries about the ability of the school committee to operate within the present fiscal constraints and "maintain the quality kind of program Winchester has a reputation for."

"People expect that education is cheaper than it can be," he adds, a touch of frustration in his voice. "You look at the good school systems around the country, and there are many that have higher per pupil costs."

One thing Perry questions is priorities: with money obviously available for life's pleasures, where is the money for education?

Another source of frustration is a lack of trust between different factions in the school system. "There's a problem of a trust quotient," is the way Perry puts it. He says when you go to town meeting, you can see that there is a lack of faith in the recom-

Tri Community is 2 years old

Tri Community Health Services, Inc., is celebrating the second anniversary of its incorporation this July.

"Today we are seeing patients who are sicker due to shorter hospital stays. The challenge of serving the sicker patient and the chronic disease patient is being met effectively by a multi-disciplinary health care team now available to all residents requiring their services in the home," says Jayne Tapia, RN, MSN, professional director.

"The Arlington, Lexington and Winchester Visiting Nurse Associations merged two years ago to provide the community served with a stronger agency," she states.

"Available to everyone through the non-profit home health care agency is a comprehensive array of health services in addition to skilled nursing: Physical therapy, speech therapy, occupational therapy, home health aides and social work consultation. Citing the agency's growth, Mrs. Tapia indicates that Tri Community has increased in all program areas and increased visits by 36 percent in all three towns over last year. The agency is providing high quality home health care while increasing its services to the community.

"Utilization of the many professional health services of Tri Community in the home can mean the difference between independence and institutionalization to the elderly in many cases," she points out.

While the new name and merger are only two years old this month, the Visiting Nurses Associations in all three towns have existed for 75 years — always as private, non-profit agencies serving the community.

Tri Community is governed by a volunteer board with equal representation from Arlington, Lexington and Winchester residents and is currently headed by Mrs. Anna Demurjian.

Weekend rides

Proposed commission may help restore Middlesex Canal

The Middlesex Canal, out-of-use since 1853, may be getting a second chance.

Completed in 1795, the canal was a prime trade route between Boston and Lowell, hauling both goods and passengers until the railroads put it out of business in the middle of the last century.

Barely six of the original 27 miles still hold water. Remnants of the old canal — ditches, milestones, parts of locks and aqueducts — can still be seen along the towpath route. Up in Woburn by the Col. Loammi Baldwin Mansion is a 6 mile stretch which has been saved. A replica of one of the original, flat-bottomed packet boats, the Col. Baldwin, now carries visitors up and back from the mansion under horsepower.

Two horses have been trained to pull the packet boat, and rides on the Col. Baldwin may be had for a small fee on weekends at 2 p.m. from the Baldwin Mansion to School street in North Woburn. The mansion is located at the junction of Routes 38 and 128.

But more help is on the way, largely thanks to the efforts of the Middlesex Canal Association, headed up by Winchester resident Frances Verplanck.

A bill now before the state Senate would create a Middlesex Canal Commission, made up of 15 members, one from each of the municipalities bordering the canal, plus three non-voting members (the commissioner of environmental management, the director of the MAPC, and the director of the Northern Middlesex Area Commission).

The main purpose of the commission would be to restore as much of the canal as possible to its original state for use as a public park and establish an historical walkway. The commission would also serve as a conduit for donations of money and land to the park.

The bill is being co-sponsored in the legislature by Reps Sherman W. Saltmarsh and Nicholas Paleologas of Woburn.

At last word, the bill was still in the Senate and may not make it back to the House for a vote before the end of the week, when the legislators are expected to take a summer break.

Budget copies are available at Town Hall

Copies of this year's town budget, as approved by town meeting, are available for public examination in the town manager's office (hours: 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m.).

Additional copies are on file at the public library. Public access to the approved budget or a summary of the budget, is a requirement of the Federal Revenue Sharing laws.

recommendations of the school board, recommendations coming from persons who put a lot of time into figuring the situation out.

"We have been blessed in Winchester with concerned school committees since I've been here, especially the present one," recalls Perry. But when they have to go to town meeting and face the finance committee, Perry admits, "I don't know why we don't have the trust."

And the problem has increased over the years, by Perry's assessment. The continuing urge to slash the budget worries Perry, who compares Winchester to Brookline and Lexington, where, he says, town meetings passed the school budgets with much less hassle. And in Lexington, the local board has taken advantage of declining enrollments to further reduce pupil-teacher ratios.

"The last five years have been particularly difficult," Perry says. "We can't continue... to cut things so fine. We'll go on and educate the kids, but I think there's a big job to be done in personnel." He also states his concern for the classroom situation, suggesting that the school department try to improve the situation rather than continue cutting back personnel.

"I'm not saying we should go on a spending spree," he continues. "I believe in fiscal responsibility." And as proof of that, he notes that for every year he has been in Winchester, the school department has turned money back to the town from the personnel services budget.

The fiscal pressures on the school committee are met on the other side by pressures from the teachers' union. This in turn puts a strain on relations between the central administration and the staff in the schools.

"I think we're going to see more mediation," is Perry's prediction for the near future. "There's no question that drawn out negotiations create tension in the staff." Perry concedes it is difficult to go through such a process and "maintain the kind of mutual understanding relationship you want."

On the other hand, from Perry's standpoint in dealing with the teachers, he maintains, "We divorce our negotiating positions from our daily work quite well." In addition, the school committee, according to Perry, "wants to develop a relationship with teachers away from the bargaining table."

As for bargaining, Perry says the system needs someone to come in and resolve the differences. He admits that the fact finding process which led to a settlement this year put pressure on both sides to compromise. "The unions are not going to discontinue asking for progress, and there is more and more pressure on the school committee to hold firm... It's very difficult for the negotiators to show their bottom line."

The strength of the Winchester Schools, as Henry Perry sees it, is the kids. Though he admittedly does not get very close to most students through his job, Perry says, "I know the profile, and I know it's a good one." While there is a small group which exhibits "aberrant" behavior, "the large percentage of them are great kids."

Another strength is in the faculty. "People say there are teachers who don't do this or don't do that, by and large we have a very excellent faculty... a high caliber of principals and teachers."

One aspect of school committee policy Perry is especially pleased with is that "the school system in Winchester has always been supported in hiring the best qualified personnel and resisted the temptation to hire people simply because they lived in Winchester or were related to someone here."

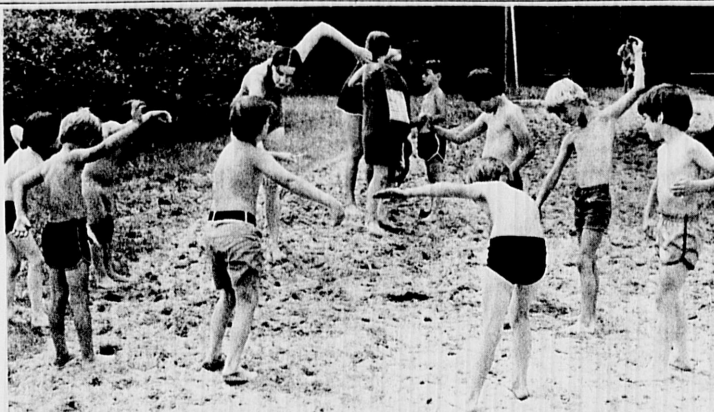

He sees Boston's move to residency requirements as "a big mistake," arguing that the school system does not exist to give persons jobs but to educate the children. While there is a lot of pressure, as job opportunities decline, to hire local residents, "the school committee has resisted it, and you can't say that about all communities."

"I'm glad I came to Winchester," says Perry, who, after 13 years, is looking forward to doing something different for the next few years. He plans to continue working full or part time — he may follow his eldest son to Maine, where Thomas Perry, 32, is an assistant principal for a high school in Orono. Another son, Charles, 30, works for the Institute for Foreign Policy Analysis at Tufts University.

Henry Perry's quiet manner has served the school system well for 13 years, and his leaving marks the end of a cycle in the progress of education in Winchester. It may be appropriate, in some ironic way, that the position of assistant superintendent for personnel is to be abolished as the only man to fill it retires: no one person will be filling his shoes.

Muraco children adopt a pony at Children's Zoo

The Muraco Elementary School children have chosen Honey, the Shetland pony, to adopt in the Boston Zoological Society's "Adopt an Animal" campaign.

Each student was requested to donate a small amount of money to the pony; the enrichment committee will make up the difference on the $125.00 animal.

When the animal is adopted, the students may visit her any time during the year, for free, along with all the other exhibits at the Children's Zoo in Franklin Park.

The Muraco School is the first school in the region to adopt an animal. The school, along with Principal Richard Young, has always shown a strong interest in the Zoo's programs for their attendance at the Zoomobile and the Endangered Species Program.

The Adopt an Animal campaign at the Zoo is one of the ways the Zoo is preparing for the reconstruction of the new Franklin Park Zoo. For further information about adopting an animal call Ellie Spinney at 442-2005.

'Yellow Submarine' at library July 15

"The Yellow Submarine" is coming to town, and on Friday, July 15, will be at the Winchester Public Library.

A unique animation classic, made in 1968 and starring the voices of the famous pop singing group "The Beatles," the story concerns the kingdom of Pepperland which has been invaded by the Blue Meanies. There are lovely visual ideas — a fish with hands, which swims breast stroke, people decanted out of a glass ball, a landscape of other-worldly types and animated versions of the Beatles, combined with songs, jokes, and puns.

The New York Times review says that "The Yellow Submarine" is a family movie in the truest sense — something for the little kids who watch the same sort of punning stories, infinitely less nonviolent and refined, on television; something for the older kids, whose musical contribution to the arts and longings for love and gentleness and color could hardly present a better case; something for parents, who can see the best of what being newly young is all about."

Seating is limited; pick up free tickets at the Library. There will be two showings, one at 3 p.m. and one at 7 p.m.

Paul Maxwell earns Eagle Scout badge

An Eagle Scout Court of Honor was held at 12 Woodside rd. June 16, where Paul Maxwell was awarded the badge of Eagle Scout, the highest honor given to Boy Scouts.

Presenting the award to Paul was Minuteman Council President Donald Van Roosen, who outlined the requirements which include earning 24 merit badges, serving as a leader in the troop, and participating in a major service project in the community. Giving the Eagle Scout challenge, Minuteman Council Scout Executive Robert Hempe outlined the continuing responsibility that Scout Maxwell faces as he meets his challenge as a leader and achiever.

Paul Maxwell joined Troop 507 in September, 1970. He has held the positions of Patrol Leader, Senior Patrol Leader, and member of the Leadership Corps. Paul attended Parker Mountain Scout Camp in New Hampshire for four years and acted as Patrol Leader for two of those years. He has completed the Junior Leadership Development

Course. In 1973, Paul attended the National Jamboree in Moraine State Park in Pennsylvania and in 1975 participated in a High Adventure trip to Philmont Scout Ranch in Cimarron, New Mexico. There he received the Philmont Arrowhead and the 50 mile hike award.

In addition to Scouting, Paul is active on the Winchester High School gymnastic, track, and soccer teams.

For his Eagle Project, Paul organized, worked, and recruited volunteers for the Winchester High School Volunteer Program. This project involved more than 50 hours of work throughout the school year at the Winchester Hospital.

A cookout and buffet was organized and directed by Mr. and Mrs. Francis Selvitelli and Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Polcari. Distinguished guests included Rep. Sherman W. Saltmarsh, who presented Paul with a citation from the State House. Rev. Walter Davis gave the closing Benediction.

Friday night flicks

The recreation department is trying something new this summer which should be of special interest to families, young people, and senior citizens. The department is running a series of Friday Night Flicks at the high school at small charge.

The programs will begin first with cartoons at 7:30. Families who come with children may stay just for the cartoons if they wish or they may stay on for the feature which begins at 8:15.

The first Flick will be "Oliver" on July 15.

Successful Fridays will present "Abbott and Costello Meet the Keystone Cops" on July 22; "Bonnie and Clyde" on July 29; "Great Race" on August 5; "Wrecking Crew" on August 12; "Big Mouth" on August 19; and "The Producers" on August 26.

The films were chosen by high school students for general appeal. Recreation director Don Spinney says that if this series is successful, the department could try a winter series.

Serving The Community For Over 95 Years

Born on the Fourth

Big Brother is waiting.

Uncle Sam is being turned into a Sugar Daddy, and everyone could use one of those, only this Sugar Daddy is bigger than life and is developing a tight grip on the strings.

Here we sit at the kitchen table with the little Sony tuned to the evening news. A reporter spins his tale, while in the background an electric army of conveniences hums away: refrigerator, dishwasher, disposal, electric can opener, electric coffee grinder, all-speed blender, instant boiling hot water tap, automatic ice machine, air conditioner, electric typewriter.

Every now and then, the lights dim.

The trash can sits full of disposable bottles, disposable cans, disposable wrappers from products purchased with disposable income. On the tube, which has itself been known to take on the characteristics of a disposable item, a canned voice reaches out in an attempt to sell still more disposable rubbish.

As we sit there, disposing of our lungs with a cigarette or two, the newsmen comes back on to describe the latest environmental disaster—a dying lake, a chemical leak from some railroad tank car, oil spills, endangered species. And our reaction to that, in this day and age of omniscient federal government, is, "Gee, can't they do something about that?"

Just where did government get out of hand?

For many, the Great Depression dashed the hope that an unregulated free enterprise—the economic version of individual responsibility and right to self-determination—could control itself. A few held onto that individual dream, which is one of the strongest roots in American History, dating back before the first Fourth of July. Most accepted (did they have any choice?) a compromise: the New Deal.

But the bureaucracy has grown: welfare, Social Security, agricultural and oil subsidies and price controls, an alphabet soup of regulatory agencies attacking everything from saccharine to sleepwear, research programs investigating the mating cycles of Boll Weevils and developing less messy means of destruction. And you can throw in hieroglyphic tax forms and consumer protection for good measure.

It's not all so bad—much of it is needed. The problem is a generation is growing up a whole generation away from the Depression, in an atmosphere of affluence where the whole definition of "life's necessities" has been altered. Desperation has been turned to dependency. We expect too much from the federal government, too little from ourselves—a sweeping generalization which may offend; but looking at our society as a whole, it seems true enough.

President Carter hit a soft spot when he called his energy program the "moral equivalent of war." Whatever the relative merits of his individual proposals, the description fits to this extent: the enemy during the 30's was for most folks some force beyond their control, intangible "kinks" in the system out there. The enemy today is ourselves, our attitudes and habits—and that's so moralistic it belongs in the pulpit. And it smacks of the truth.

Much of the problem revolves around awareness. In such an abundant society as ours, it is difficult to see the value of conserving when there's so much to go around. What's the use in recycling a can here, a bottle there? Isn't riding about in luxury and prestige worth a couple dollars more every time you pull up to the pump? Life is short.

And short-sighted. For a fresh perspective, collect all the cans used in a month in one household, multiply by 12, then by years and populations. Count the number of trips to the gas station in a month, then multiply that too and consider that some automobiles get three, even four times the mileage of others.

Try on for size these statistics from the Environmental Protection Agency:

"Although the number of companies and individuals who re-use potentially valuable materials is growing, the United States today recycles a lower per cent of its resources than ever before in history. Nationwide, the amount of paper that is diverted back to useful purposes is growing—but slowly. In 1972, 11 million tons of paper was recycled compared to 9 million in 1962. But product consumption has increased drastically—in 1972 we used 64 million tons of paper, 50 per cent more than in 1962."

Unquestionably, the world of big business with all its incessant advertising has a great deal of control over our habits. Advertising manipulates our awareness of what we "need"—that's not a condemnation, merely a statement of fact. Besides, we still retain an incredible degree of choice.

But the consumer, like the voter, has a good deal of power in this society. And like the voter, he persistently refuses to exercise that power, as though it were an infringement on his freedom of choice to have to make an educated decision.

When the voters don't choose, the politicians do. When the consumers don't choose, more and more often the government steps in and makes the choice.

Here we come to an essential question: do we choose to deal with this society's problems—economic, social, environmental—on an individual level, or do we let the government make the decisions for us? In the face of an expanding government, are we losing the ability to decide for ourselves?

And what, after all, do we celebrate on July Fourth? —DKF

Charter changes?

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

In the period since the Winchester Home Rule Charter was adopted in 1975, no serious effort has been undertaken to consider possible amendments to the Charter. Various town bodies and a number of concerned citizens have, however, from time to time offered suggestions for improvements to the Charter.

Last month the town meeting, in response to a citizens' petition, voted to authorize the Committee on Government Regulations to study suggestions for proposed revisions to the Charter. The committee has been charged to hold at least two public hearings and to report back to the town meeting not sooner than the fall 1977 annual meeting. Among the subjects specifically to be studied is the schedule for preparation and publication of the town manager's and the finance committee's proposed budgets.

The committee intends to hold its first public hearing on a date to be announced shortly after Labor Day. The committee hopes that anyone who wishes to propose a change in the Charter will notify the Committee as soon as possible of that fact and of the general nature of the proposed revision. We ask that notification of such proposals be made no later than August 31, 1977 by writing or calling the undersigned.

Sacred ground

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

In last week's Star, the front page article was about the bicycle committee seeking a path along Palmer street. I am opposed to such a scheme which would cost $45,000.

As for using a part of the cemetery land for such purposes, it is unthinkable. In my opinion, it cannot be done, legally. The owners of lots in Wildwood Cemetery could very easily be unhappy because such a path would be trespassing sacred ground. Also there is strong opposition from some of the residents of the Linden street and Middlesex street areas.

I have discussed this matter with other taxpayers and they agree that the money spent on the present bike path and the path's total lack of use was a disgraceful expenditure of town funds. Also, I and many others with whom I've discussed this, have never seen anyone using the bicycle path. It has a grand title, but that is all.

The town meeting members amended a by-law two years ago allowing cyclists to use any sidewalk in Winchester. Hence—every sidewalk in the town is a bike path anyway. Vincent G. Carroll

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The Winchester A Better Chance program plans to hold a giant yard sale in October. We have already started to collect items for the sale and we hope to amass an interesting and varied selection over the summer. If you are moving or cleaning house we hope you will consider donating your treasures to us for the sale. We'll accept just about anything you don't want as long as it is in good condition. If you are having your own yard sale this summer perhaps you would save your left-over items for us.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

To Charles Fiske, president of the Winchester Business and Professional Association:

Thank you for your help in making the bicycle rodeo a success.

An undertaking such as this takes a great deal of help and generosity to make it work. Ours worked because you became involved. We feel we may even have saved a child's life or avoided a tragic accident by preparing a rodeo such as this, to provide practical, safe bike-riding skills.

From all the elementary children and all of us, thanks. If you saw the happy faces as we did, you know how much they enjoyed it and cheerfully learned a little more about safe cycling.

Benefits

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

These are some of the benefits I think the elderly should have and now. They do not have money to buy these services but need them badly.

Medicare will pay for an eye examination, but not glasses, which are around one hundred dollars. Hearing aids do not come under Medicare. Teeth are needed for our aged. It is disgusting to see an old person trying to eat or talk with no teeth. If you ask them why no teeth, they will say they can't afford them.

Feet for our elderly is a must, but people do not take care of their feet, young or old and the elderly can't get down to care for their feet so this is needed badly. I do not think Medicare pays for feet any more. Maybe some of our rich politicians can help with these services.

Too bad our old folks have to fight for anything they get.

Town watch...

Dump hours changed

By The Observer

Dog Officer Nick Molea needed some advice Tuesday night and so he got on the police radio.

It seems he was closing up the dog pound at 8:55 p.m., a reasonable duty for a dog officer. But he was also the target of some irate citizens of Winchester who wanted to storm the locked gates of the dump. He contacted police headquarters and asked what he should tell the dumpers.

The desk officer responded, "Get the hell of there before they kill you!"

There is a sign posted at the inner gate which displays the new hours for dumping. There is no sign at the outer gate.

The Observer would like to think that readers of The Star are aware of the new hours which ran last week. For your information, and to prevent further disruption to the closing of the dog pound, we repeat the hours of operation at the transfer station:

Monday through Friday from 7 a.m. until 8 p.m. Saturday from 7 a.m. until noon.

Winchester, without a doubt, has its share of housebreaks and larcenies—more than most communities on a per capita basis. The reasons are not hard to see.

One deterrent which has had some success is the Neighborhood Watch program. Our neighbor Arlington recently set up just such a program, and down in Duxbury there are already signs of success.

The idea is to encourage residents of a neighborhood to keep an eye out for any suspicious activities that may be going on and to contact the police when it appears all is not as it should be.

Police Chief John P. McHugh is interested in setting up this kind of program, and anyone interested in details should feel free to call up the station and ask about it. No great commitment is involved—only a little more awareness of what's going on in the neighborhood.

The town has received a revised Cherry Sheet from the state, based on audits of educational programs for which Winchester receives reimbursement from the state.

The difference is that Winchester will be receiving about $3855 less than previously estimated. Under Chapter 70 aid to education, the town will be getting about $1000 more than expected for 1978; this is offset by decreases in the 1977 Chapter 70 funding and in the amount to be received for vocational education at Northeast Regional Vocational Technical School.

A final tally on the tax rate, prepared by the town's assessors, is expected in the latter part of July.

Books & blueberries

By Elizabeth Mahoney
Correspondent

Did you ever dream of changing city life for a residence on Cape Cod? Swapping a nine-to-five job for your own business? Changing careers at mid-life?

Russ and Eleanor Pingree, formerly of Hinds rd., did just that last winter. They are the proud owners of a brand new store, the Book Browse in Barnstable Village on the north side of rte. 6A, the Cape's Cranberry Highway, near the Barnstable County Court House.

"We have dreamed of owning our own business," said Eleanor in an open air interview on the deck of her new home in nearby Centerville. "I took a course on starting and managing your own bookstore from The American Booksellers Association. We scouted throughout the Cape for a well-settled location that didn't have a book store."

Husband Russ concluded his job with a technical firm in Woburn but Eleanor continues to commute one day a week to Boston. She is editor of "Where," a tourist-oriented magazine distributed to visitors in the Boston area.

Eleanor doesn't mind the commute because she enjoys the location of her new home. "I love to tell people that it is the first turn left past a cranberry bog," she said. "In fact I have wild blueberries growing in my front yard."

There are bobwhites and whippoorwills in their yard, a saltmarsh is not far from the store location.

Son Tom, 12, is the only one who made the move with the Pingrees. Three other children are grown and not living at home.

Eleanor was active as a Town Meeting Member and in programs at St. Mary's Church. She was once a New York Times correspondent in N.J.; now she is the Centerville reporter for the Barnstable Patriot.

Two Winchesteries are represented in the book store. They are Edward McCarthy, Maple rd., author of the fictional "The Pied Piper." Color photos by famed photographer Arthur Griffin are also available.

In anticipation of using some wild blueberries, Eleanor checked her store's cookbooks and found "The Country Art of Blueberry Cookery" by C.D. Morrison. The following recipe is taken from the book.

Birta's Blueberry Muffins
1 1/2 cup sugar
1/4 cup shortening
1/2 cup milk
1 egg
1 1/2 cups flour
1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup blueberries
2 tablespoons flour

Cream shortening and sugar together in electric mixer. Add egg and milk. Sift dry ingredients and combine with liquid batter. Fold in blueberries which have been dredged in two tablespoons of flour. This keeps the berries from sinking to the bottom of the muffin pan during baking. Pour mixture into greased tins. Bake 30 minutes in 400 degree oven.

In the mood ...

By Karen Whittlesey-First

I thought for sure that nothing could beat last year's Fourth of July. In fact, nothing could top the whole month of July 1976. I still think that.

But we came pretty close for part of the day Monday as we accompanied the USS Constitution on her yearly turnaround in Boston harbor.

Now you have to understand something. The unnamed, unchristened, unostentatious vessel which transports this family into the Charles river or out to Castle Island or down to the yacht club in Southie for a beer and a fill-up, is a mere child's toy in a bathtub. But she's hardy and more or less reliable.

So it was I spent most of Sunday cooking chicken, chopping tomatoes, peeling potatoes, chilling the lemonade, and generally creating chaos in the kitchen as we readied for the excursion.

Any time you put four kids, a picnic basket, and a large cooler in a small boat with two good-sized parents, it's an excursion. Through some miracle known only to someone watching over us, the boat started and off we went out into the harbor.

We thought we would tag along behind the black-hulled ship which had already set off for Castle Island, listen to the two 21-gun salutes and then head up the Charles to find a landing spot to wait for the concert and fireworks.

What happened was we pulled up right next to her and watched in awe as this ship received the tribute of hundreds, maybe thousands, of boats who had come out to see her. We stayed and stayed and just couldn't leave her side. We followed her back and waited patiently as the two tugs pulled and grunted as they gracefully slipped her back home.

What a ship she is! And what a tribute was hers in the July 4 sun in Boston harbor!

There were the sleek, white yachts with their tanned owners sipping bloody marys and recalling cruises on the Riviera. There were weekend sailors who had already sent their kids to college and paid off the mortgage and now were enjoying retirement on the waves.

There were the ones like us, wanting something to have fun with while the kids are young.

The one who got our vote for sheer guts and independence, though, was the older man in his bright orange life jacket who kayaked his way into the harbor and then followed Old Ironsides back to her berth. He disregarded the wakes of the yachts and schooners and motor boats. He smoothly paddled his way between fireboats, tugs, and coast guard launches.

As we got ready to leave Castle Island the coast guard called out to clear the area for a water display and then suddenly the fireboats let out with fountains and gushes of water in tribute to a great lady. There were cheers from the luncheon crowd at Anthony's and cheers from the picnickers on the rocks of East Boston. The helicopter rotors added their applause from the air and the hundreds of boats tooted their horns.

The harbor released a cacophony of horns and bells as yachts with their deep-throated calls and runabouts with their shrill toots cheered the Constitution.

We left the kayaker far behind as we followed the ship back home. His orange vest became smaller and smaller until it disappeared altogether. Then as the ocean, disgruntled by all the boats churning its waves, dipped briefly, we could just spot him paddling along.

When the ship was finally placed at her berth for another year of blistered tourist feet plodding over her decks, for another year of symbolic reminder of the power that was Boston's and America's, for another year of steady reassurance, we didn't say a word.

We left her and went through the Charles river locks. Then it was time for lunch.

Winchester, England fights to save River Itchen canal

While one commission on this side of the Atlantic deals with preservation of the Middlesex Canal, another commission on the other side of the ocean is trying to preserve another canal. The irony is that both canals run through Winchester, the Middlesex in Massachusetts and the River Itchen Navigation in Winchester, England.

The problem in Winchester, England, is the fight to prevent the extension of the M3 roadway past the city and over its water meadows to Southampton and the sea. The building of the road would necessitate moving the canal, a "bureaucratic extravagance" according to Observer reporter Patrick O'Donovan in the May 22 edition of the English newspaper.

The canal, like our own Middlesex, is no longer navigable for its entire length, although part of it is used by the College in Winchester for boating practice.

O'Donovan reports that the proposal would provide for the digging of a plastic-lined canal for the River Itchen. It appears that the waterway can be changed only by repealing relevant acts of parliament which date back to 1667 and include five other acts.

The canal was built in the 12th century for a Winchester bishop. O'Donovan calls it "a major act of early medieval engineering." By the Act of 1667 a commission was established charged with maintaining the navigation on the water. The proper name for the River Itchen, "famous for its clarity and trout," we are told, is the Navigation. A public hearing into the matter is being held but the inspector handling the inquiry refuses to postpone discussion, saying that he is "not empowered to pronounce on points of law."

O'Donovan describes Inspector Major-General Raymond Edge as "academically brilliant, patient under boredom, silent under pressure, courteous to those who would provoke him."

Up against this gentlemen are the commissioners, whose group has not been called to meet for more than one hundred years, who are fighting for the preservation of the Navigation. O'Donovan says about the audience of 100, that they "tend to be mature and, with money, intelligent, confident faces; they all look as if they were having difficulty with their dividends. They look as if this was a final and heartfelt protest."

He goes on to reveal the warmth and concern of these people for the meadows and river which flows through Winchester, England.

It's ironic how two Winchesters, separated by 3000 miles, are concerned over the future of two canals.

Arbitration: opposing views explained

By Sen. Samuel Rotondi

Politicians and commentators have argued for years over the merits of final and binding arbitration for municipal employees. The debate has flared to new proportions in recent weeks with the Governor's veto of a proposed two-year extension of the current binding arbitration law, and the legislature's overriding of the veto.

While the controversy has generated great heat, it has produced precious little light that could help citizens to frame a responsible opinion. In the hope that I can help illuminate this complex issue, I herewith offer an explanation of my vote to sustain the Governor's veto and my general opposition to the current binding arbitration law.

First, the very idea of tying cities and towns to the dictates of state-appointed arbitrators seems to me to violate the concept of home rule. State arbitrators, however carefully selected and well-intentioned, cannot hope to understand local fiscal realities as fully as the municipal officials elected to deal with those realities. Nor can anyone appointed on Beacon Hill represent the values and viewpoints of the local citizenry as accurately as elected officers of the cities and towns.

Secondly, what about home rule and self-government? Are these merely paper principles rendered thus by state mandated programs like binding arbitration? I asked my colleagues this question while debating this issue on the Senate floor. I also asked which Senators would support a similar law removing control from the legislature over state employees' salaries.

When the town of Arlington filed suit to challenge binding arbitration, the State Supreme Judicial Court ruled that the current law was a proper delegation of legislative authority and not an infringement on local prerogative. With the home rule argument thus defused by the court, I then considered a compromise version to retain some basic form of arbitration while altering those parts of it that had made it a grievous fiscal burden on the municipalities. I considered and quickly rejected the obvious answer of creating locally elected boards of arbitrators. While such an approach would leave no doubt that the communities' interest would be represented, municipal workers expressed their concern about the independence of a panel elected by the taxpayers.

Next, I intensively studied alternative forms of the present law, and discussed possible compromises with local municipal employees. One such compromise which was defeated on the Senate floor dealt with the last and final offer aspect of the Massachusetts law.

The Commonwealth is saddled with a rare and inefficient system known as "pure" binding arbitration. Under this law, arbitrators must adopt the final offer of either labor or management. No matter how outlandish certain points of it may be, the most reasonable last offer has to be accepted without compromise deletion or addition. In most states, where the so-called "traditional" binding arbitration law holds sway, arbitrators can reduce extravagant demands, raise parsimonious offers, and balance the municipality's ability to pay with the worker's right to be paid. The difference between the pure and traditional forms of arbitration is the difference between rigidity and flexibility between absolutism and compromise.

Police and firefighters' unions have traditionally favored the pure form of arbitration because, in practice, it gives the upper hand to labor. Since binding arbitration went into effect in Massachusetts, fully two-thirds of all cases brought to arbitration have resulted in a victory for labor. Knowing they will probably fare better in arbitration than negotiation, most union leaders have little incentive to avoid impasses with management. The statistics speak unequivocally on this point: the three years before the current binding arbitration law went into effect saw only 168 impasses between municipal governments and their workers; in the two and one-half years since, there have been 355 impasses.

Municipal workers know they have less to fear from state-appointed arbitrators who are unfamiliar with the local tax situation than from city and town officials responsible for balancing municipal budgets. Arbitrators naturally tend to judge wages by the high standards set in private industry, yet few arbitrators understand how much more limited in resources the public sector is than the private sector. Buoyed by their record of success, municipal labor leaders sometimes make intentionally high final demands, and all too often their audacity has been rewarded. Still more often, labor negotiators have pushed unreasonable demands by including them in otherwise modest final proposals, thus forcing arbitrators to take the bad with the good.

I do not mean to imply that municipal workers are unreasonable in negotiations or that municipalities deserve to win every arbitration case. I know that many cities and towns seriously mistreat their employees, and that no amount of money could wholly remunerate police and firemen for the sacrifices they are daily called upon to make. But with the current sophistication of labor legislation, I feel the courts and labor boards can adequately protect workers from bad faith negotiations. And in view of the fiscal dilemma now facing cities and towns that are reliant on a static or shrinking tax base, I believe municipalities and the homeowners who comprise them should receive greater consideration than state-appointed arbitrators have as yet accorded them.

Further, I cannot completely accept the most common argument for weighing the arbitration process in favor of municipal employees, the assertion that because police and firefighters are peculiarly disadvantaged in not being able to strike they should be peculiarly advantaged in dealing with management. I would ask, is the prohibition against striking the fault of obstinate municipalities, or is it inherent in the profession of a police officer or firefighter? If the municipalities are not to blame, why should they be punished in binding arbitration?

On the other hand, there is no question that some municipalities take advantage of the inability of their protective forces to strike and that disturbs me greatly. But to suggest that binding arbitration is the only means by which to prevent such mistreatment is an exaggeration of an over-simplification.

A few final points should be made about the specific veto I voted to uphold in my attempt to abolish pure binding arbitration. Prior to that veto, the Governor offered an amendment which would have allowed municipal employees to go to binding arbitration only if a determination was made that the municipality was dealing in bad faith. This amendment was defeated soundly by the House and notwithstanding my support of it, would have been defeated by the Senate. A breakdown in communications in the Governor's office was responsible for Senate inaction on the amendment.

Secondly, the new law permits arbitrators not only to choose among the final offers of labor and management, but also to consider the fact-finder's report. (A fact-finder is a third party who suggests a settlement when the two sides fail to reach an agreement. If one or both sides find his report unacceptable, the matter goes to arbitration.) But this will be a meaningless reform, since the very fact that a case has reached arbitration means the fact-finder's report does not satisfy one or both parties.

Thirdly, a recent study of the effects of binding arbitration conducted by M.I.T. states that empirical data supports the conclusion that there has been no excessive awards made in Massachusetts. My question is, what is excessive? An award may not be excessive in terms of employee salaries when considered next to those of comparable communities, but may be excessive in terms of the ability of a particular community to pay at a particular time.

Finally, the binding arbitration law I tried unsuccessfully to stop is only a two-year extension, with some modifications, of the law that has been in force in Massachusetts for two and one-half years. Far from being a permanent gear in labor law machinery, it is still on an experimental foot. I will be watching it closely for the next two years, and I will use the results either to change or to buttress my present opinion. I urge all of my constituents to communicate their views on binding arbitration to me, so I will be better able to evaluate it.

"To strike a balance..."

By Rep. Sherman W. Saltmarsh

I voted for a two-year extension of the last best offer collective bargaining statute after lengthy consideration and study. The legislation is designed to strike a balance between protecting the public health and safety and affording recognition to the collective bargaining rights of public employees.

Although it is admittedly not a panacea, it is the most effective tool we have to work with in the complex field of collective bargaining. It has worked in Winchester and I am convinced it can work in any community where both municipal officials and employee groups bargain in good faith.

I was involved with local salary negotiations for police, firemen and town employees long before collective bargaining became law. It is impossible to sit at as many bargaining tables as I have, without becoming aware of the sensitive nature of those procedures.

The Winchester Board of Selectmen and School Committee, as well as town employee groups, should be congratulated for the outstanding record of success they have compiled in wage negotiations. Our town has never had to resort to binding arbitration.

But if an impasse developed and the two negotiating groups were unable to arrive at a resolution, the opportunity is there. This is an infinitely better solution than a work stoppage or strike to settle an impasse.

In fact, my maiden speech in the legislature was delivered against a bill favorably reported out of the Public Service Committee that would have given public employees the right to strike. I like to think that I was instrumental in the overwhelming rejection that bill received. I see binding arbitration as a viable alternative for the public employee.

I am well aware of the claim that collective bargaining is responsible for local tax rates soaring out of sight. But one would be naive, indeed, to think that wiping this legislation off the books would restore the tax rate of yesterday. Several studies regarding the economic effects of collective bargaining show that it has not led to any significant salary increases above those in neighboring states lacking similar legislation. The MIT Sloan School of Management study stated that salaries would be almost the same if there had never been an addition to the law.

It is logical, to keep the legislation on the books for an additional two years to insure that public safety employees will not be at the mercy of mayors and town meetings who would keep them at the bottom of the economic totem pole at the same time they are insisting on top-quality performance.

What good is it to urge policemen and firefighters to acquire college degrees if they know they are to be denied a fair recompense for their performance? These employees are fighting the same battles of inflation, cost-of-living increases and tax hikes that plague us all. Just as we are, too, they are victims of an archaic state tax structure that is truly responsible for the inflationary property taxes.

Another argument advanced against final arbitration is that it nullifies home rule because it places the final decision in the hands of an "outsider". But the Town of Winchester presently engages an "outside" law firm to conduct its collective bargaining. There are few communities who don't follow the same practice. Binding arbitration allows the town to select one arbitrator, the employees group, a second and those two select a third who serves as chairman of the panel.

Thus, the selection of the chairman actually lies within the purview of the two local negotiation parties. This is as impartial a system as we have devised to date. The parties must present their individual cases through witnesses and supporting records and documentation.

There is only one way to influence the arbitrators and that is by evidence. Partiality and emotionalism cannot be used as tactics nor can undue pressure be brought to bear upon the panel as it sometimes can be in the case of elected officials.

Each side submits its last best offer for every issue still in dispute and each total package must then be considered. There is one winner and one loser. One revision that we moved along with the extension of the law, is to allow a fact-finder's report to serve as a third option for the arbitrators.

On the other hand, if the parties choose to eliminate the fact-finding step altogether they can now do so and move along to final arbitration. We made a serious effort to streamline the process.

In their determination of a community's ability to pay the awarded settlement it is now required that arbitrators must consider the community's long and short-term bonded indebtedness, the amount of state reimbursement received, the MDC assessment, the MBTA costs and the per capita tax of the residents. These factors should do much to reclude unreasonable wage demands on a community.

Once a decision has been rendered, it is now mandatory for the arbitrators to submit a written analysis of their findings to both parties within 30 days. This will enable the public to understand the reasoning behind the award.

I am well aware of the temptation today for elected officials to seize each and every opportunity to prove that they are austerity-minded. It's always easier to vote for popular legislation that supposedly will result in significant savings to the taxpayer.

But in all good conscience, I could not see that the elimination of the binding arbitration law would bring about a significant tax reduction. I can see, however, that the lack of some method of finality for public employee bargaining could lead to strikes, work stoppages and general chaos. My vote in behalf of binding arbitration was to prevent such a sorry state of affairs from occurring in Massachusetts.

Rx for your pool's pH.

Arm & Hammer Baking Soda improves and maintains your pool's ideal pH without the use of harsh chemicals.

Every pool needs a chlorinating product. And every chlorinating product needs a partner to keep your pool's pH at the ideal level.

You can use harsh chemicals.

Or you can use 100% natural Arm & Hammer Baking Soda.

Arm & Hammer Baking Soda is a natural acid neutralizer and buffering agent which helps maintain pool pH at the ideal range of 7.8 to 8.2.

And an ideal pH helps prevent red, stinging eyes. It even helps keep pool water crystal clear.

Recommended Rx for pool pH: Add 1 lb. of Baking Soda per 10,000 gallons of water weekly if pH tests below 8.2. Add a chlorinating product as needed.

Try Arm & Hammer Baking Soda in your pool. It's the ideal solution to the ideal pH.

Mischief's live up to name as undefeated season ends

The Mischief's, Winchester C1 girls soccer team, under the coaching of Peter Philliou and Phil Richardson had an undefeated season with 9 wins, 1 tied game, in winning the regional championship. The outstanding goal-scoring of Maria Montour (23 goals in 9 games), tight goal-tending by Sarah Richardson (who allowed three goals in six games), and great back up goal-tending by Carol Doherty, all contributed to this most successful season.

Offensive support by Kim Donlon, Paula Papastathis, Patty Ricciardelli, Karen Rahmeier and Paula Ricciardelli was a vital element in the victories. Strong halfback performance by Christen MacNamara, Thea Philliou, Patty Phillips, Liz Rowley, and Patty Taylor aided the offense and defense immensely and the fullbacks Laurie Schwein, Carol Doherty, and Johannah York had a significant impact on keeping the opponents scoring down. Jackie Heuter, Martha Schromm, Christine Franchi and Cathy Leonard were also valuable in the forward positions.

A team cookout at the Ricciardelli home was held Thursday, June 23, when trophies were awarded and team pictures were distributed. It was an outstanding year for the girls and they are to be heartily congratulated for their fine team effort.

A fine defensive job was turned in by outfielders which consisted of Michael Landry, Peter Lawson, Greg Govostes, Kevin Strange, Doug Ford and Jimmy Hennelly. A good size crowd was on hand to cheer on both teams.

The Whippets were managed by Steve Shugrue. The Ponies were managed by Harry Beard and coached by Bob Monterisi.

Ponies ride high to championship

The championship of the minor league went to the Ponies this past Little League season. After coming in first place in the National League they defeated the American League Champion Whippets 9-2 at Ginn Field last Wednesday.

The Ponies were aided by strong pitching from Dave McCall who yielded only six hits and struck out nine. David Rand handled the catching and did a superb job as he has all season. The infield was made up of "sharp fielding" Mark Stevens at first; Kevin Meagher, who hit a two-run homer in the 5th inning, at second; and Terry Skahan, who also hit a two-run homer, but in the second inning, at shortstop, and Jimmy O'Neil, at third. Also substituting at third base were Charlie Field, whose pitching record was 5-0, Jeff Ciccio, who hit a solo home run in the second inning, and "clutch hitting" Michael

C-2 team loses to Wightman in 3 tight matches

By James R. Stewart Jr.

Faced with an almost impossible task, the Winchester Tennis Association's C-2 doubles representative in the Men's Suburban League failed to upset Weston's Wightman Club last week.

Although the Winchesterites, headed by Bud Johnson, had won their division rather handily, their opponents, winners of Division I, had not lost a set during the season just finished.

Dr. Philip Richardson and Jack Noble broke the skein of the Wightman team by winning their second set, 7-5, but the visitors to the Packer Courts took the first set 6-2 and the third and deciding set, 6-4.

Ed Fitzgerald and Neil Hurley fell 6-2, 6-0 to put the three-match contest away for the ultimate victors, while Captain Johnson and Bill Ferry struggled in vain in the third match, trying to avoid a shut-out, losing by the tight scores of 6-4; 7-6 (tie-breaker).

Women's tennis ends season with softball

by Jane Johnson
A bright, sunny day brought out the Women's Tennis Teams for their annual softball game at Ginn Field. To say that some of these girls made the Winchester Cap League look like the Red Sox could be the understatement of the year.

In a comedy of errors, only marred by Mary "Lemon-ball" Golden's excellent pitching, Cowan's Cuties outlasted Pomeroy's Pinups, 14-11.

The Cuties took an early lead in the contest thanks to the Pinups' fielding errors, led by Cynthia "Sticky-glove" Daley, who was out in left field (along with the rest of the team).

Deedee "No-pitch" Cunningham was sent to the showers after she proved she could not pitch a ball within 10 feet of the plate. Sue "Junk-ball" Cowan came out of the bullpen to offer the Pinups some of her left-over junk from the tennis courts.

The Pinups tied up the score at seven-all in the fourth inning after the Cuties managed to make five errors on one play. After a few minor shifts in their infield — Carolyn "One-catch" Cummings to the outfield, Arlene "Where's-the-ball?" Estabrook to third base and Jane "Motor-mouth" Johnson to shortstop — the defense held strong.

In the top of the sixth, the Cuties' power got to the Pinups pitching staff, and they went on to win the contest.

The winning Cuties were: Sue Cowan, Joan Gorassi, Dottie Dexter, Deedee Cunningham, Jane Johnson, Arlene Estabrook, Anne Ferry, Carolyn Cummings, Peggy Wiseman, Bee Gonnella, and Nancy Mills.

Rainy day program

In the event of rain, all Winchester recreation programs will be held indoors at the high school gymnasium. Program hours will be from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

Bruce C. West, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth C. West of 16 Collamore rd., receives the Military Order of the World Wars Silver Award, presented by the Air Force to the most improved sophomore cadet. A sociology major at the University of Massachusetts, West was also named an Air Force ROTC Outstanding Cadet.

Women's B team wins suburban tennis

The Women's Tennis Ladder came to a close in June with 49 teams participating in challenge matches during a six-week season.

The top 12 teams played in the Women's Suburban Tennis League and played seven matches with surrounding towns.

The "B" team won their division in the WSTL and were recently honored at the annual spring luncheon at the Weston Golf Club. Members of the team were Carolyn Cummings and Jo DiVincenzo, Nancy Mills and Marlene Rothmann, Lou Fackert and Verity Feldmann, Bobbi McNamara and Pinky Samoiloff.

Members of the "A" team were Deedee Cunningham and Peggy Wiseman, Bee Gonnella and Sandy Pomeroy, Joan Richardson and Lucy White, Sue Cowan and Cynthia Daley.

Members of the "C" team were Dottie Dexter and Nancy Martin, Jane Johnson and Jane Norberg, Anne Ferry and Glenda Green, Joan Byrne and Molly Tarr, Kathy Alexander and Beth Fortin, and Mary Golden (substitute).

Cub pack 508 ends year with overnight

The Minuteman Council recently held its annual Olympics at Joyce Junior High School in Woburn, with boys from Winchester, Woburn and Arlington attending. Jimmy Funk won a gold medal in the 50 yard dash and the stand broad jump. Donny Weckel won a gold medal in the softball throw and Brian Foley won the bronze medal in the softball throw.

This year's activities ended with a father-son overnight held at Winning Farm, with the boys and the dads cooking out, camping and hiking.

Any boy in the Noonan School area who would like to become a Cub Scout and will be 8 years old should contact Cub Master Len Weckel, 142 Sylvester ave.

The Pack is also planning a uniform exchange in the fall. If you have a Cub Scout uniform you no longer need, please contact Mr. Weckel.

William F. McCall named chairman of Mass. land bank

Governor Michael Dukakis has designated William McCall, Jr., a leading industrial real estate broker, as chairman of the Massachusetts Government Land Bank. McCall has been a member of the Land Bank's nine-member board since its creation in 1975.

The Land Bank was created to encourage local redevelopment of the South Boston Naval Annex and the Boston Army Base, Westover Air Force Base, the Chelsea Naval Hospital, and the

by the local community and the Land Bank's board of directors.

In announcing the appointment the governor said, "Bill McCall has already played a key role in the Land Bank's operations, drawing on his twenty years of experience in the industrial real estate field. Now, as chairman, we expect that he will accelerate the work already underway to convert these prime sites and facilities into successful job and tax-producing uses."

Charlestown Naval Shipyard following their deactivation as military facilities.

The Land Bank has the authority to buy the bases from the federal government, maintain them, and then sell them for uses which create new jobs and tax revenues. It also gives technical assistance for planning possible reuse. The redevelopment plan for each site must be financially sound and must be approved both

FUTURE SHOCK!!!

Who would have thought that we'd ever look forward to an annual inflation rate of 6 percent with an emotion close to ecstasy? Yet, today that's what we're doing. The reason, of course, is that after three successive yearly hikes averaging better than 9 percent, 1976's 6 percent increase looks pretty good. Don't be fooled — 6 percent inflation is high. At that rate prices double in 12 years.

What would happen to housing prices with a 6 percent yearly cost-of-living increase? A home that cost $45,000 now would increase to $90,548 in 12 years. In 20 years it would cost $144,320. In 30 years it would sell for $258,456.

What does all this mean? Whatever your age, you must find a way to create an income in addition to your pay check. Although there is no such thing as the perfect investment, real estate may be the nearest thing to it. It can be an income producer, a shelter from high taxes, and an ideal protection from the ravages of inflation. Real estate values historically increase faster than general inflation prices and maintain a higher value than most assets in depression. The ideal hedge.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at ANN BLACKHAM & CO., 11 Thompson St., Winchester. Phone 729-1663. We're here to help!

Ambrose School's 6th is the first to go the route

On June 21 an assembly was held honoring the first sixth grade class to have completed seven full years at Ambrose Elementary School.

While it was not a graduation, at "a leap forward," several students gave their impressions of what it had been like to have attended an open area school in preparation for another educational experience.

This was followed by a short trip down memory lane with Robert G. Forest, the principal, on what it was like those first few years seven years ago. A slide show was also presented denoting events the students had shared together from K-6.

The program concluded with the awarding of certificates to each member of the class by Principal Forest and a reception for students, teachers, parents, and friends.

Third in a year

Cross street home damaged in two-alarm fire Sunday

The home of Mary Collins, 374 Cross st., was heavily damaged in a two-alarm fire Sunday night which brought in apparatus from Woburn, Stoneham, and Arlington to cover for all Winchester pieces at the fire. This was the third fire at the residence in the past year.

Mrs. Collins was not at home when the fire broke out at 11:57. The second alarm was sounded at 12:08 a.m.

The fire caused extensive damage, mostly to the rear of the single family house. Water and smoke damage inside the newly renovated dwelling was heavy.

A call was received at fire headquarters giving the location of the fire as "the upper three hundreds" on Cross street. The state fire marshal's office is investigating the origin of the fire.

In other fire news, the department has sent out the ambulance 13 times since taking it over July 1. The fire chief reminds the town that any emergency medical calls should be directed to the fire department — 729-1800.

Since the beginning of July there have been 23 calls for brush fires and several calls for leaf fires at the incinerator.

WHS star

Home-town hero Bellino in Football Hall of Fame

By Rick Pearl

Joseph Michael Bellino, possibly the greatest all-around athlete this town will ever experience, was recently inducted into the Football Hall of Fame along with other greats such as Gale Sayers and Leo Nomellini. The formal induction ceremony will take place this December at the annual New York Touchdown Club Banquet, where the Heisman Trophy winner is annually unveiled.

Joe Bellino, three-sport star at Winchester High School all three years he attended, was one of those college football stars gifted enough to win the Heisman Trophy, for his phenomenal senior year at Navy in 1960. In addition to his football exploits, Joe also was a member of two Class B State champions in basketball, and much-scouted baseball catcher.

At the Naval Academy Joe was all-encompassing, and his name was bannered in newspaper headlines across the country. In his junior season he became the first player to score three touchdowns in the classic Army-Navy game, and then proceeded to lead the Midshipmen to the Orange Bowl in his senior year.

The final chapter in the success story, then, was his inevitable selection to the Hall of Fame. Like any good novel, the author was well aware of the conclusion.

"Fortunately it wasn't really much of a surprise to me," said Bellino the other day, "because I had some indication that I was going to be elected this year. Being elected to the Hall of Fame is gratifying in that I'm still a young guy (Joe is only 38) and I can enjoy it."

In comparing the two major fetes that he has accomplished in his distinguished football career, Joe finds there is little separating them as far as greatest single achievement. "It's really a toss up between the two," Joe stated. "When you talk about the Heisman award, there've been only 35-7 players that have won it, while there are so many hundred in the Hall."

"On the other hand," Joe continued, "when I got the Heisman I was still preparing for the Navy game, and thus the impact of what the whole thing meant didn't hit me. The Heisman Trophy just seemed to fall inline with all the other awards, and I don't think I really appreciated the significance of it then."

"Right now this election is more satisfying to me, because I know what it means to get in," the man who made his hometown famous explained. "But both honors are very different and I can't really pick between the two."

Joe has no problem in distinguishing the most disappointing sports-related affair. "That would have to be, without a doubt, our basketball defeat in high school to Duffee in the Class A Tech. Tourney Final in 1956," Bellino revealed. "We had won the Class B Championship for two straight years, and decided to accept a spot in the Class A playoffs. We were beaten on a last-second shot at the Garden, 62-60."

Other than that agonizingly close defeat, Joe's high school career was generally one of great success. In his sophomore year, 1953, Bellino was already receiving rave notices as a football player. Bellino wore jersey number 77, 50 digits higher than the number 27 that became famous in his Navy days.

The big game that season came against unbeaten Wakefield, then known as the Scarlet instead of the now familiar Warriors. A win, which appeared to be imminent to all but a few observers, for Wakefield would have insured them the Class B championship. Winchester snapped their streak with a "convincing" 28-13 win, and Bellino was Joe Bellino as he looked in his Winchester football days. He's wearing number 30 here, but 27 was the jersey made famous in his Navy days.

Selectmen authorize payment

Town owes county $15,000 for detox center costs

Winchester owes an additional $15,536.45 over the original amount for which the town was assessed by Middlesex County, according to Michael E. McLaughlin, chairman of the Middlesex County Commissioners. Selectmen voted Monday night to pay that amount, at the same time questioning the process whereby such a large sum was added on.

Winchester's original assessment was for $285,399.69. When the state discontinued funding the detoxification program at the Middlesex County Hospital in Waltham, Winchester's share of the hospital's cost was set at $15,536.45. Another $16,327.76 was added on as a result of the state legislature mandating a cost of living increase for all county employees not covered by collective bargaining agreements.

In releasing the money to the county, Selectman Arthur Dunbar asked Town Manager Thomas J. Groux to request an explanation from the county regarding the necessity of adding to an assessment. "How can we control this in the future?" he asked. Selectman Edward O'Connell questioned the need for a detoxification center at Middlesex County Hospital, but no discussion on that matter ensued.

Other matters Explaining that "the business is making me a nervous wreck," Patricia Sennott July 6 passed papers transferring ownership of MacDonald's Restaurant, 107 Cross st., to Ralph Paoletta of Somerville.

Both parties attended a hearing called by the board of selectmen Monday night on application by Paoletta for a common victualler's license.

Although board of health and police reports were incomplete at the time of the hearing, the selectmen granted the license conditional on their completion and on requirements of the fire department, most of them electrical.

Paoletta told the board that he would be operating between 6 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. and that in spite of his relative youth (Paoletta is 20) he has had extensive background for such an undertaking. He grew up working in his family's business and for the last ten years has been doing grill and short-order work, he told the board. Mr. Sennott, who accompanied his wife, added that for the past week or so the young man has been working with Mrs. Sennott and "proved himself very capable."

Paoletta said he expects final inspections and appropriate recommendations within a few days. At the request of selectmen, Public Works Director Walter J. Tonaszuck prepared a compilation of past action taken by the town regarding rules and regulations at the town's reservoirs. This was in preparation for discussion on and possible approval of opening the area around the reservoirs to limited public use.

Cab hearing postponed to Monday night

The continuing saga of James T. Sullivan's Winchester Cab Company goes on for another week, with selectmen giving Sullivan and his attorney, Daniel J. O'Connell III, until next Monday to come up with a buyer for the four-cab fleet.

Sullivan, unable to meet insurance requirements as a taxi owner, has been operating his business as private livery pending the sale of his company. Selectmen have been trying to hold a public hearing to show cause why his four hackney carriage licenses should not be revoked.

Sullivan has a potential buyer, William Dietz who runs 12 cabs in Melrose, Malden, and Stoneham. Dietz and Sullivan have discussed a contract but Dietz wanted to hold off signing until he could clear up some problems with selectmen at their regular meeting Monday. The public hearing had been scheduled for Monday, but at Attorney O'Connell's urging, the hearing was postponed another week.

Dietz was concerned over cab stands in town. There is one stand in the square for two cabs in front of 1 Shore rd. There is a cab office at that site, Pacy's new cab business

Conserve water

Although excessive water use in Winchester has not reached emergency level yet, selectmen are urging more conservative sprinkling of lawns and gardens in the wake of increased use of MDC water.

Walter Tonaszuck, director of public works, told selectmen Monday night that water use is up, particularly on the west side, from a normal 1.8 million gallons a day to 4.5 million.

Winchester buys 38 percent of its water from the MDC, but increased use this summer has meant that the town is purchasing more than 50 percent of its water from the MDC.

Selectmen have not put a ban on water use, but are urging conservation at this time.

After hearing Tonaszuck's reasons for keeping the area closed and after looking over the compilation of official action since 1905, the board decided to continue the ban on public access to the reservoirs in the Fells.

In addition to reasons of sanitation and purity of drinking water, Tonaszuck pointed to the problem of policing the area. He said that there is one man to cover the 800 acres during regular working hours and another who patrols until dark.

Regarding water purity, Tonaszuck said that the operations manager of the water and sewer division and the director of public works are both liable for a contaminated water supply. The EPA requires testing of drinking water and publishing results. Tonaszuck said that he considers the town's drinking water to be of "exceptional" quality now and within the strict standards imposed by the EPA. He questioned maintaining this quality if public access were to be granted.

Barbara Hankin "exceptional" quality now and within the strict standards imposed by the EPA. He questioned maintaining this quality if public access were to be granted.

Barbara Hankins, who had expressed an interest in opening the reservoirs to hikers and joggers, said, "I have to change my mind about the wisdom of allowing access to them." All members of the board praised Tonaszuck and the supervisory staff of the water department for the thoroughness with which they prepared an eight-page package of the town's previous stands on the reservoirs.

There is no set of rules and regulations governing the reservoirs at this time, but at Chairman Hankins's suggestion, Tonaszuck will work to write a set for use by the town.

In other matters, the board agreed to recommend replacement of 1000-lumen incandescent street lights on Cross street with 3500-lumen mercury vapor lights in an effort to improve traffic conditions in the Cross street-Loring avenue area.

With several neighbors in attendance, the board went along with Town Manager

Thomas J. Groux's suggestions, based on reports from police, public works, and engineering departments.

The recommendations, in addition to improving seven street lights, would continue enforcement of speeding regulations and turning movements at Loring and Cross, extend sidewalk plowing along the dirt portion of sidewalk east of Loring toward Kirk, and would install small aluminized reflectors on poles and trees to help delineate the edge of the road.

Neighbors, concerned over the 17 accidents at this particular location in the past two years, were pleased at the expeditious manner in which selectmen handled the problem.

Groux cautioned the half dozen residents present, "It will take a long time to get those lights changed, but be assured that they will be changed." Arthur Dunbar added, "Give it several months and if there isn't a vast improvement in the situation there, be sure to get back to us."

Selectmen were scheduled to meet last night with the planning board for an open talk about matters of mutual concern. Their next regular meeting will be held Monday night.

112 units

Housing for elderly proposed

A private Boston-based development company has applied for federal assistance to build a 112-unit complex of low to moderate income housing for the elderly between Waterfield road and Rangeley ridge. It would be known as Winchester House.

Arthur D. Ullian of Boston Investment and Development Corporation has filed application for Section 8 assistance and has taken his case to the planning board. Selectmen Monday night received notification of the application but deferred making comments until a meeting with the planning board in two weeks. Selectmen have until July 28 to submit comments and recommendation to the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The original application calls for 181 one-bedroom units renting for $396 a month and nine two-bedroom apartments going for $467 a month. When Ullian attended the planning board meeting June 20, he said he was interested in 156 units. They would be contained in two apartment buildings, each four to six stories. Ullian also contemplated a community building. Town Manager Thomas J. Groux told selectmen Monday that the number of apartments has now been lowered to 112, but he was not sure of the distribution between one- and two-bedroom units.

Members of the planning board had questioned the number of units in a residential area, saying that 156 units might be excessively dense for the area. They also concurred with neighbors present who called attention to possible traffic congestion and lack of parking space.

The sponsor and contractor for the development is Abreen Corporation of Needham Heights. Under Section 213 (c) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, HUD must determine if there is a need for housing assistance. Playing a part in HUD's decision is the recommendation of the board of selectmen, as well as the consideration of whether there are public facilities and services adequate to serve the housing proposed. HUD also takes into account applicable state housing assistance.

Other arrests

Residents surprise burglars in break-in Most folks whose houses are burglarized arrive home too late; Monday one local resident came home just in time.

Around 10:20 p.m., a resident of Fairlane terrace arrived home with her two sons and surprised two youths in their house. The sons chased the two, who had bolted for the back door, and caught them in the woods out back.

The police were called and arrested the two suspects; a third got away but was later identified and turned in by his parents. All three were turned back over to their parents and charged with breaking and entering in the nighttime with intent to commit larceny. The woman and her sons discovered stereo speakers out on the back patio; other speakers, a watch and other items were also recovered.

On July 10, a Lawrence man visiting his parents on Cross street heard some loud noises, glanced out the window and saw a man smashing his father's car windows with a tire iron.

The man ran outside and a second suspect jumped out of a parked car, and a fight ensued. When the visiting son's brother ran out of the house to help, one of the suspects fled in a car.

When police arrived they took both the Lawrence man and the remaining suspect to Winchester Hospital for treatment of facial cuts. Both were released from the hospital. The suspect, Hugh Watson, 23, of Somerville, was arrested and charged with assault with a dangerous weapon and malicious damage to property.

Based on the second son's description of the fleeing car, police eventually picked up a Woburn resident, 20-year-old Paul Adgate, and booked him on the same charges. Both suspects had their case continued in Woburn District Court.

In another example of how keeping an eye on one's neighborhood can work, the observations of an Olde Lyme road resident led to the arrest of several bicycle thieves.

On July 8 a woman called the police and reported observing a suspicious vehicle in the neighborhood. Police later ran across the car and found three youths in it and a yellow bicycle sticking out of the trunk.

When asked where they got the bike, the three in the car said a friend, who they named, gave it to them. They were taken to the station under arrest. The three, aged 18, 18 and 16, were charged with larceny.

The friend named by the three, aged 12, was later picked up riding another bicycle around Cambridge and Church streets. He was apparently waiting for the others to come back and pick him up. Both the bicycle he was riding and the bike in the trunk were stolen from Plato terrace. The four had their case continued to Aug. 8.

Three persons arrested at 20 Pond st. June 11 for possession of marijuana went to trial in Woburn District Court June 11. Rickard L. Parker, 20, was found guilty on three counts: cultivating marijuana, possession with intent to sell, and conspiracy to violate the narcotics drug law. Beverly Bairstow, who was renting the house at the time, was found guilty of cultivating marijuana. Both were fined $250 and sentenced to one year's probation.

A second man apprehended at the time, Carl D'Agostino of Melrose, had the charges against him dismissed. According to the police, D'Agostino was working on a repair job in the house at the time of the raid.

A story in last week's Star about a stolen bicycle has led to the identification of the owners of the bike, according to Police Chief John P. McHugh. A neighbor recognized the bike from the description in the paper and called police, who eventually contacted the owners.

Police made several arrests in the past week for protective custody. Two persons were arrested on July 9 for drunk driving and leaving the scene of an accident; one of the person was also charged with driving to endanger. The latter was apprehended with the help of auxiliary officer Al Venuti, who saw the car, which had run into two signs at Pond street and Woodside road, turn down Oxford street. Venuti directed officers responding to the scene to Oxford street, where they nabbed the driver.

There were numerous reports of vandalism, including damage to police call box no. 80 on Ridge street. Someone emptied 10 shots from a 9mm Luger pistol into the box. A neighbor reported hearing noises "like firecrackers" and saw a man drive away in a car. Other incidents were reported at the town yard, including broken windows and locks and stolen gas. On July 5 a van was stolen from the yard and later returned with some keys missing.

Chief McHugh noted that some residents have not been complying with the new by-law governing garage sales. The regulations went into effect in February and requires that all such sales be licensed. Violators may be fined $50. Details about the by-law are available at the selectmen's office in Town Hall.

★ Cab hearing

bought from Bill Falzano, but it is a public stand for any licensed cab. Dietz asked, "Where will I put four taxis? My drivers buy their own gas and they're not going to drive around looking for fares."

Selectmen Chairman Barbara S. Hanks suggested the larger cab stand at the train depot, but Dietz commented, "There are no real pick-up jobs there."

Dietz said that he intends to run a 24-hour service seven days a week. His drivers lease the cabs for either daily or weekly contracts, which Dietz renews or not, depending on complaints or other problems with a specific driver. He said that his ten cabs in Melrose and the one each in Malden and Stoneham are run this way. The driver buys his own gas and keeps the cabs clean. Dispatching and repair work are done in Melrose, but gassing and garaging will be in Winchester, Dietz said.

This comment prompted Hanks to ask, "How can the board of selectmen then issue individual hackney operator licenses?"

There are no other rented cabs in town. Selectmen have a police check made on drivers and then issue individual licenses authorizing a person to drive a cab.

Dietz said that each town gives authorization in a different way. In Stoneham, for instance, there is no police check.

Selectmen Edward O'Connell finally interrupted the discussion to say, "I am getting weary of this subject. Let's resolve it one way or the other. We are here to hold a public hearing to show cause why James T. Sullivan should not have four hackney carriage licenses revoked."

Attorney O'Connell said, "We have shown good faith in coming before you with reasons for continuing the hearing for a week or so and I ask your indulgence in putting off the hearing."

Selectmen O'Connell and Arthur Dunbar were opposed to the extension, but when Atty. O'Connell said that he would be prepared in one week to go on with the hearing, only Dunbar maintained a negative vote.

Sullivan said that he continues to refer any calls for cab service to other companies. Lt. Andrew Crawford added that the police department has not received any complaints about lack of service since Winchester Cab stopped operating a week and a half ago.

The hearing will go on next week, whether or not Dietz and Sullivan reach an agreement. In any case, if Sullivan's licenses are revoked, a new owner would need to apply for new licenses.

It remains to be seen if there will be any action on increasing the number of cab stands in Winchester. Selectmen questioned location and need for more. Dietz suggested that his method in Stoneham, where there is another cab company, gives both companies fair access. A cab may sit at a stand for a predetermined time and then has to cruise, giving another company a fair access to the stand. In addition, Dietz said, the first cab for a job at a stand is the one which is last in line. He backs out and the first cab takes his spot.

Dietz has been running cabs for four years and his parents have had cabs for 15 years. "I've had a successful business," he told selectmen. "There are two things I do with all my cabs which I think makes the public want to call my company. I give a 20 percent discount to seniors over 60 who buy coupon books and the other thing is, if my driver doesn't get out and open the door for a customer, the customer doesn't have to pay the fare."

If you drive to public transportation, take a neighbor. It's cheaper.

Inspector Nash completes course in anti-terrorism

Winchester's Police Department now has the advantage of a new kind of expertise: Inspector William Nash has recently completed a course in anti-terrorism training.

Nash heard about the one-week course through the Northeast Municipal Law Enforcement Council, which operates special tactical units comprised of members of local police departments in the Greater Boston area.

Fully funded by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, the course is conducted at the Illinois State Police Academy in Springfield, Ill.

Nash attended the course from June 9-24. He is one of two officers in Massachusetts trained in anti-terrorist tactics, according to Chief John P. McHugh.

Among the subjects studied were the history of political violence and terrorism; revolutionary organization and goals; contemporary terrorist groups; hostage negotiation; dignitary protection; incendiary and bomb devices; governmental response and responsibilities; and "super-violence."

Wild geranium

At Smith Pond, near the water's edge and deeper into the woods, the dainty tooth-leaved wild geranium brightens this whole area with its delicate lavender blooms, from May to October.

The Indians used this plant for greens. All parts of this plant were used by our ancestors as a treatment for bleeding ulcers or dysentery. The powdered root was used as a coagulant for wounds.

You should notice the tuft of hairs at the base of each petal which protects the precious nectar of this upright flower from the rain and dew. Each blossom is one - one and one half inches in diameter. (Smith Pond is the first of Winchester's Conservation Acquisitions.)

THE WINCHESTER STAR

Serving The Community For Over 95 Years

Now's the chance

Winchester will have another chance at allowing a "high quality" restaurant in town — with a liquor license — when selectmen and attorneys, plowing through piles of legislative requirements, state statutes, town tradition, and such, meet next week with two men interested in opening a place in town.

It is certainly not the first time that selectmen, or the town for that matter, have been faced with the question of allowing good wine and good food to enhance each other at the dinner table of a local restaurant. But it may be the first time that the question will be resolved into a reasonable solution.

The selectmen have asked Town Manager Thomas J. Groux to dig into the process of obtaining a liquor license in town. At the same time, attorneys for the parties interested in the restaurant business are coming up with their information. At next Monday's regular selectmen's meeting, the pros, cons, and processes will be hashed out and maybe some conclusions drawn.

According to the Alcoholic Beverages Commission, there would have to be a town referendum held at the same time as a state-wide election. Unless we petition the legislature to allow the referendum at a town-wide election, the soonest date the question could be brought before the town on a ballot is November 1978. To get the question on the ballot, ten percent of the voters voting in the last town election (March) would have to sign a petition.

There is another way of doing it so we wouldn't have to wait until November of next year. If the board of selectmen approves a warrant article for a town meeting, and if the town meeting approves the article, we can petition the legislature to allow the question at the next town-wide election, which is in March 1978. It would take a special act of the legislature to do this, but it could be done.

Town Counsel Douglas A. Randall has advised that a referendum could be specifically geared to Winchester's particular need. For example, in the town of Wilmington there is a single license issued in conjunction with a restaurant with the specific requirement that the restaurant must have a seating capacity of not less than 99.

It would undoubtedly be a difficult task to find a suitable location for such a large restaurant in Winchester, but we could specify a seating capacity of, let's say, 50 or so. The point is, we could allow a liquor license without having the matter get out of hand, one of the fears some opponents have expressed.

The meeting Monday should be enlightening. It should be important. Best of all, it should lead to some exciting possibilities. — KJL-WF

State House roll call

THE HOUSE Week of June 6-10

The House gave final approval 185-43 to the fiscal 1978 $4.175 billion budget, (H 6100), and sent it to the Senate. Among aspects of the bill which could have particular significance for Winchester is the $8 million to begin a phase state takeover of county court costs. Rep. Sherman Saltmarsh voted in favor of the budget package.

He also voted for a $29 million increase in the amendment on local school aid. Supporters of the amendment argued that the additional state aid would provide much needed property tax relief to communities. Another amendment to the budget was defeated 144-80. This amendment would have cut the state's 65,000 employees by a flat ten percent. Saltmarsh voted in favor of the cut.

In other bills before the House this week, Saltmarsh joined the overwhelming majority of representatives to vote 215-5 for the $289.9 million transportation bond issue. The issue provides funds for highway, railway, and Mass Transit construction.

Saltmarsh voted in favor of increasing rates at the University of Massachusetts Medical School to $5000. The current tuition is $760. Under the provisions of the bill, students could pay roughly the same $760 if he agreed to serve at least two years practicing medicine in a needy area of the state. The House defeated the bill 116-103.

He voted against allowing optometrists to use certain diagnostic pharmaceutical substances previously restricted for use by optometrists, which dilate the pupil and relax muscles around the eye.

THE SENATE Week of June 6-10

Senator Sam Rotondi cast a minority vote this week when he chose not to support a call for a national constitutional convention to amend the United States Constitution to prohibit abortion. Opponents to the resolution noted there is no precedent for setting an agenda and doubted whether anyone could limit the subjects brought before the convention. Supporters of the resolution claimed opponents were exaggerating the dangers involved. The vote on the item was 24-14 in favor.

An amendment to the resolution was defeated on a tie vote 18-18, Rotondi voting in favor. The amendment would have prohibited tampering with the Bill of Rights if a national constitutional convention were called as a result of requests from 34 states.

The Senate approved 25-10 an amendment to legislation rolling back 1977 auto insurance rates and rebating some $56 million to nearly 500,000 drivers. Rotondi voted in favor. Another amendment which would freeze 1978 rates at 1977 levels for all accident-free drivers was defeated 20-13. Rotondi voted against this amendment.

THE HOUSE Week of June 13-17

The House gave final approval 149-27 to the "anti-redlining" bill prohibiting banks and loan institutions from denying home mortgages in blighted urban neighborhoods. Saltmarsh voted in favor of the final bill but voted against amendments.

One amendment would have prohibited banks from using lending standards not based on economics or that are based on geographical discrimination. The House voted against it 147-78. Another amendment, which the House approved 121-98 but which Saltmarsh voted against, allows applicants who are refused mortgages in Boston and Springfield to appeal to those cities' housing courts. The third amendment would have prohibited banks and lending institutions from denying home mortgage loans arbitrarily on the basis of the undesirable location of the mortgage property. Saltmarsh joined the majority in voting against the amendment 125-91.

The House rejected a binding arbitration amendment which would have limited binding arbitration only to those cases in which the state labor relations commission found the parties in a labor dispute failed to bargain in good faith. The vote was 158-67, Saltmarsh voting against.

Human services needs humans

By The Observer

Selectmen have not yet made appointments to the Human Services Committee because only one brave and concerned soul has applied to the seven-person body which will look into human services in Winchester — an overdue and worthwhile cause. Selectmen Chairman Barbara Hankins has offered to represent her board on the committee, but as of Monday, other boards have not made their appointments made known.

There are two vacancies for members of the public on this group. Applications in writing are being eagerly awaited at the selectmen's office in Town Hall. Prospective members will be interviewed at next Monday night's regular meeting.

Despite many calls and letters before the recent carnival held at Manchester Field, there were no complaints once the fair got going. In fact, it would seem that James Flynn, manager of Fiesta Shows of Salisbury Beach, and Chet Sewell of the Central Middlesex Association for Retarded Children did a fine job for the four days and nights of the carnival.

For future reference, however, Fire Chief Robert W. McElhinney is recommending that fairs and carnivals operate no more than three days, that they close at 11 p.m., that there be a three-month interval between carnivals (there were four events within a month at Manchester), and that other sites be considered.

They sound like good recommendations. The chief made them, not because of any trouble with Flynn or Sewell, but more out of sympathy for residents in the area who have to tolerate noise, lights, and traffic.

The Star received a letter this week on binding arbitration — a rather vehement one at that — which was signed but gave no indication of address; therefore, the letter could not be verified.

That is why we ask that letters be typewritten, double-spaced, and signed along with the printed name and address and a telephone number. Names and addresses will be held upon request.

A young Somerville man of 20 has taken over ownership of MacDonald's Restaurant on Cross street. After the routine meeting with selectmen Monday and the vote to issue Ralph Paoletta his common victualer's license, Selectmen Arthur Dunbar quipped, "I vote for your application and youth is no obstacle. I was 20 years old when I came to Winchester to open a business and I've been here ever since."

Dunbar has made numerous contributions to the workings of this town in the years since then. The Observer finds it encouraging that Winchester is still able to bring in promising young business persons.

Proof that town officials can function in a human manner, that is with compassion and reasonable speed, came in the form of praise for two departments this week.

On the one hand, board praised board as selectmen thanked the department of public works for its efforts in compiling a history of the town's attitude toward allowing the public free or even limited access to the reservoirs. Tonaszuk and supervisory personnel from the water department did a thorough and speedy job in helping selectmen reach a decision about rules and regulations pertaining to the reservoirs.

On the other hand, it was citizenspraising board when the neighbors in the Cross street-Loring avenue area met with selectmen to urge them to take action to eliminate traffic problems at that intersection. The board and town manager were prepared to recommend several changes, such as improved lighting, which neighbors were very pleased to endorse.

One of the women said, "Someone told me it would be a waste of time to bring this up with the board, but you are very gracious and quick to help us and we thank you." The board beamed back its thanks.

Digging in the past

By David Funkhouser

We went for a walk, Mrs. VerPlanck and I, along the route of the old Middlesex Canal.

We met alongside the Mystic Valley parkway by Sandy Beach on the Upper Mystic Lake. There sits a stonemarker with a bronze plaque near the spot where the canal crossed over from Medford into Winchester more than a hundred years ago.

The course of the towpath cuts across Winchester like a wrinkle across an old man's forehead—through backyards and behind the Wyman Schoolyard, down Palmer street and across Wildwood Cemetery, through living rooms on Middlesex street and on up to Horn Pond in Woburn.

In its prime, the canal was a major trade route, a highway of water between Charlestown and Lowell. On the last day of 1803 the canal was completed, opening a waterway stretching from Boston to Concord, New Hampshire. In the wild salt air the clipper ships unloaded their cargoes onto creaking wharves in the port of Boston. Cotton from the South, calico, silk and spices from the East were loaded onto barges for the long pull along the canal. From New Hampshire, boats laden with hides, timber, charcoal and produce wound their way south. Packet boats carried families and their possessions from city to farm and back again.

Little remains of this marvel of Early American engineering. Our walk took us along the rise just above the upper shore of the now-polluted Mystic Lake, on a paved path bordered by low ridges — the towpath and berm, or opposite bank, of the canal. At the head of the lake is a depression where the water slowly flows down from the upper pond — the current held back by the holding ponds of factories along the Aberjona to the north. With the slower current, the water temperature rises, and this in turn cuts back the number of types of aquatic life; algae, however, manages to thrive. With algae, the oxygen supply in the water decreases, making the lake even less habitable for plants; and the process continues.

The depression at the top end of the lake used to be a hayfield, with the Aberjona running through its center. One might imagine the giant draft horses, sweating from the strain of pulling loaded barges along the canal, pausing at the sweet smell of early summer hay.

Across this gap, a three-piered aqueduct carried the canal to the far knoll. Mrs. VerPlanck pointed out a few old stones lying on the opposite bank, possibly remnants from the original abutments of the aqueduct. Then she paused, bent down and took a close look at a crop of wildflowers growing on the shore, as though they too were remnants of sorts. She called my attention to the long green stems and yellow blossoms of a patch of pond lilies poking above the still surface of the lake; and I noticed the brown stem of a lone beer bottle bobbing among the green pads.

Beyond the Mystic Lake, the canal route is marked by a ditch lined with undergrowth.

We drove around to Sheffield road and parked the car. Mrs. VerPlanck showed me the house at 45 Everett avenue, built partially with beams once used to support the canal. We started off again, tramping across backyards, behind garages, through fences to follow this extinct trade route out to Church street.

There used to be a bridge over the canal at Church street. Nearby lived a man named Huffmeister, one of a whole slough of characters who colored life along the canal. Huffmeister was a Hessian soldier who came to fight with the British in the American Revolution and decided to stay. He was not popular at first because of his role in the war; but that seemed to suit his style. He was a free and independent soul, a bit of an eccentric with his corncob pipe and jacket made from corn husks.

The ditch runs behind the Wyman School, behind a row of houses on Fletcher street, emerging again near Wildwood terrace to cross over to Palmer street. You'd never know it was there.

At the lower gates to the cemetery, the path cuts in off Palmer street and runs along the edge of the hill to Middlesex street. There a row of houses sits right in the bed of the canal, one layer of civilization plopped down on top of another.

A pair of locks continued the canal across Horn Brook Pond. Just up the hill, across Canal street from the Noonan School, the ground is freshly turned to make way for the Tiffany lane development—yet another layer.

At the end of Sylvester avenue a path cuts through the trees, overgrown with weeds and wildflowers—sky blue chicory and black-eyed susans. Shards of broken glass from beer bottles line the path, waiting for some future anthropologist to puzzle over their meaning. By now the ditch has pretty well disappeared. We walked at last out of the woods into Woburn, through a housing development where the only indication that the Middlesex Canal ever existed is a sign tacked to a light pole marking the beginning of the Towpath Bikeway through Woburn.

In 1973 the story began with the Middlesex Canal Charter. Among the proprietors of the project were many familiar names: John Hancock, John Adams, John Quincy Adams, James Sullivan, Loammi Baldwin, Josiah Quincy—presidents and governors, merchant princes and engineers.

Commercially, the canal played a major role in the development of trade and industry in the Northeast. The project also represented one of the first great feats of American civil engineering and served as a focal point for other achievements (for example, the first steam barges were built at the Symmes Forge near Mystic Lake).

In the mid-nineteenth century, the railroads took over; then came the highways. Picking through the remains of such an important piece of American History, one can't help but wonder what sorts of clues we will leave behind.

Dishonorable campaign

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

We are witnessing a dishonorable campaign to destroy Ian Smith's pro-western anti-communist government in Rhodesia. And to our shame, the U.S. government, with its millions in aid to Rhodesia's newly Red neighbors, is a party to it.

Except for a well-publicized handful of so-called Black Nationalists, Rhodesians of all colors only want to be left alone. Rhodesia's blacks overwhelmingly support their government. They know that they enjoy better health, education, and economic conditions than anyone else in black Africa.

Rhodesia has become a tragic scene of man-made confusion and evil engineering in the outer world. No "explosive" situation ever existed in Rhodesia. The only explosives were those brought in by Russia and China-trained terrorists who slip across borders of neighboring communist puppets using Russian and Chinese bombs and weapons.

And now hear this: When Henry Kissinger appeared before the senate committee on finance on March 7, 1974, Senator Byrd questioned him about Rhodesia after noting that the United Nations is authorized by its charter to impose sanctions ONLY on nations found to be a threat to world peace. The exchange went as follows:

Byrd: In your judgment, is Rhodesia a threat to world peace?

Kissinger: No.

Byrd: In your judgment, is Russia a potential threat to world peace?

Kissinger: I think the Soviet Union has the military capacity to disturb the peace, yes.

Byrd: In your judgment, does Russia have a more democratic government than Rhodesia?

Kissinger: No...

How is it that the western world has been "persuaded" to unleash war on stable, peaceful Rhodesia? Ah yes, Rhodesia is a stumbling block between the architects of the New World Order (world government) and the place they really "thirst" to get at: South Africa.

Something is very rotten — much closer to home than Denmark!

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

A nice way to help our teenagers and keep them out of trouble would be to put them to work for pay, so they could buy clothes for school or college, etc. Most of these kids would like something to do so they could feel useful.

I know we have the CETA program. There is good money in this.

All our rich politicians have to do is talk (no action) until too late. The town fathers could round up these kids and find out who wants to earn some cash and put them to work to clean up our beautiful state. People have become slobs and use our lovely land for a dump and worse. It is most distressing to go to a small town and see what unthinking people have done to vacant lots, etc.

Remember we live in the best part of our state and as far as storms go and a lot of other things, it is the best. So let's not throw things out of cars and teach our small fry to be neat. This begins in the home. Make the kids pick up their clothes and help you with household chores. Won't hurt a bit.

Usually they will say it's too hot or too cold for excuses. Don't let them get away with this. They will respect you better as teenagers.

Collecting

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I am a handicapped veteran, living on a small pension. My vision and hearing are slowly leaving me. The doctors say they can do nothing, so I have made hobbies to keep busy and fight off periods of depression and despondency, which seem to plague me most of the time.

While I am collecting antique valentines and old post cards, I am also collecting rare old calendars and advertising cards, in hopes of writing a book about the items I collect, and earn enough from it to get off this small VA pension and have medical care, which the VA is unable to afford me, so my hobbies have a dual purpose.

Living on limited funds, I depend greatly upon friends and others for much of the items I collect, and was wondering if any of your readers had any antique valentines, old post cards or rare old calendars they do not want, because I would be happy to have any they may care to send me and be glad to get them.

Thank you for your time and kind consideration in reading my letter.

Billion-dollar smiles of achievement are shown during recent signing of the billion-dollar, comprehensive transportation bill by Gov. Michael S. Dukakis. Flanking the governor are, from left, Secretary of Transportation Fred Salvucci; Rep. Sherman W. Saltmarsh Jr., a member of the House Committee on Transportation; and Rep. Louis Nickinello, chairman of that committee.

Sen. Rotondi reports...

Tax bill would allow for local control of exemptions

Senator Samuel Rotondi reported recently that the sub-committee on property tax exemptions is exploring the possibility of reporting a local option bill relative to property tax exemptions.

Such legislation would give communities a local control over standards of eligibility and levels of benefits affecting widows and the elderly. Optional alternatives to the present statutes would become effective upon the affirmative vote of a city or town's legislative body. The communities which do not adopt the new clauses would continue to be governed by present statutes.

The advantages of such legislation would allow communities to tailor its exemption levels and standards to the ability of other taxpayers to bear the burden. Communities could also update benefit levels and qualification standards to compensate for inflation without the necessity of legislative action. As a safeguard, a mechanism and standards for review by the State Tax Commission would be included in the legislation.

The senator indicated that the comments and advice from assessors, legislators and others has provided the sub-committee with valuable insight into the problems and inequities caused by the present statutes; specifically, the fact that differing assessment ratios result in inconsistent and unfair standards of eligibility and benefits for applicants.

"Simply raising the whole estate, income limits, and the amount of exemption is not a viable solution," said Rotondi. The sub-committee felt this solution perpetuated the present uneven standards. It was also felt that this solution would overburden the tax base in many communities where exemptions are already generous. "If any statute mandated increased eligibility for an amount of exemptions it would be construed as imposing additional costs on towns and cities. This would be a difficult proposition in a year of local aid cutbacks and tax increases."

Sen. Rotondi, Rep. William Shaughnessy and Rep. Nick Paleologos have all field legislation relative to reforming the real estate tax system. Nevertheless, before the general statute increasing exemptions could be enacted, a precise estimate of the tax impact of such a statute in each community would be needed.

That requirement would eliminate any chance of enactment this year. However, the local option bill could probably be moved through the Legislature quickly.

Transportation bill allocates $28.663 for road construction

The recently-enacted, billion-dollar comprehensive transportation construction package was described today as one of the most positive actions taken by the legislature this year by Rep. Sherman W. Saltmarsh Jr., a member of the House Committee on Transportation that drew up the legislation.

The act calls for a $290 million bond issue that will be matched by $700 million in federal funds and will lead to the creation of at least 40,000 jobs, Saltmarsh claimed.

The comprehensive railroad transit, accelerated highway and railroad construction and improvement program will take place over the next two years and will result in Winchester receiving some $28,663 per year for road construction under Chapter 90 of the General Laws.

Rep. Saltmarsh said that the Chapter 90 funds was depleted but as of June 30, 1979, at the conclusion of the current bond issue, provision has been made to establish it as a permanent fund with revenues coming from the highway fund. Statewide, a total of $27 million will be allocated.

Rep. Saltmarsh expressed satisfaction that his request for $2 million for the construction of bikeways was included in the bill. The cities and towns will bear 25 per cent of the costs with the balance coming from the state.

Some $210 million is earmarked for construction of federal roads other than interstate highways.

Eighteen million dollars will pay the state's share of improving the high-speed rail Northeast Corridor between Boston, New York and Washington, Massachusetts is the first state along the rail route to commit funds for its share of the project.

Some $20 million will be expended for reconstructing bridges and $45 million will go to the MBTA to finance the Blue Line extension, the Malden Center Garage and improvements to the existing system.

The bill also restricts the roll-over provision that formerly applied to the MBTA's bonding authorization. Not more than $389 million in bonds can be outstanding at any time, and any bonds redeemed on or after Jan. 1, 1983 cannot be reissued. Nor can the new issue of $45 million be reissued upon their redemption.

Rep. Saltmarsh explained that the restriction would enable the legislature to exert tighter control over future MBTA projects and would require the MBTA to exercise greater fiscal responsibility.

The comprehensive bill was adopted by both branches of the legislature almost exactly the way it had been submitted to the Ways and Means Committee, Saltmarsh said, even though several Senate amendments had led to the appointment of a joint conference committee to iron out the differences. Saltmarsh also served on the conference committee that made only minor revisions before resubmitting the bill in its original form.

"This is the second major transportation bill the legislature has passed," Saltmarsh said. "Last year we approved a $383 million package. These bills will give a major boost to the state's economy and will reduce considerably our unemployment rate."

Carmen Elio to head study for NE retirement council

The United States Department of Labor (DOL) has awarded a major contract to a New England-based group for a study of the public employer pension systems of the Northeast-New England area.

Under the contract the study team, headed by Carmen W. Elio of Winchester, will form a regional Retirement Law Council roughly based on the model of the Massachusetts Retirement Law Commission of which Elio is currently chairman. Elio is also a pension specialist with H. C. Wainwright & Co.

The Council will be comprised of the six New England governors or their designees. Serving the council will be two committees, administrative and technical, comprised of the foremost pension experts of the region and the nation. These committees will be responsible for gathering and analyzing data from all of the major pension plans in the region which currently cover over 600,000 employees and have the responsibility of investing more than $3 billion. Markey seeks candidates to military academies

Students seeking admission to West Point, Annapolis, the Air Force Academy or the US Merchant Marine Academy are being invited to write to US Rep. Edward J. Markey to request a Congressional nomination to these schools from his office.

"Admissions procedures at these service academies require all civilian students to receive an official nomination from either their Representative or their Senator before they can be considered for entry," Markey stated. "I welcome all students who are seriously interested in attending any of these academies to be filled out so that their nomination requests can be reviewed," Markey added.

All completed applications for Congressional Nominations will be examined by a non-partisan academic review board composed of three citizens who reside in the 7th Congressional District. In January, 1978, the board will make its recommendations to the Congressman on what students, in their view, should receive principal and alternate nominations to the service academies.

Congressman Markey's Boston Office mailing address is: US Rep. Edward J. Markey, Rm. 2100, JFK Federal Bldg., Gvt. Ctr., Boston 02203.

State House roll call

The House also defeated another amendment which would put the question on the 1978 ballot for a non-binding advisory opinion. The vote was 131-91, Saltmarsh voting in favor.

Final approval was given 155-54 for the two-year extension of the binding arbitration law, however, with Saltmarsh adding his vote to the "aye" side.

In other matters in the House, legislators overrode Governor Dukakis's veto and passed 201-27 legislation which requires teachers to lead pupils in all public school grades in a daily recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance. Saltmarsh voted in favor.

The House unanimously passed a $108 million deficiency budget for the current fiscal year. Included in the package is $55 million for Medicaid, $21.5 million for welfare payments, and $794,000 for the UMass Medical School in Worcester.

THE SENATE

Week of June 13-17

Senator Sam Rotondi voted "nay" on four major items during this week, giving approval only to the Pledge of Allegiance bill requiring public school teachers to lead students in a daily recitation of the Pledge.

By a vote of 18-17, Rotondi voting "nay", the Senate approved an amendment requiring a non-binding 1978 voter referendum on the bill forbidding discrimination against homosexuals in public employment. Referendum opponents argued the bill prohibiting discrimination is a basic right, should not be put to a referendum, and others noted it is also a simple, technical bill necessary to comply with the federal statute already in effect.

The House refused to table 31-1, and thus kept alive and later passed a bill increasing the number of alcoholic beverage licenses a community may issue. Rotondi voted for the bill.

On a budget amendment, Rotondi voted against only approving $22.5 million appropriation for Aid to Families with Dependent Children, instead of the entire $119.9 million deficiency package. The Senate rejected the amendment 23-5.

Senators refused to table 24-8 and later passed a bill barring discounts by liquor wholesalers to stores for prompt payment of bills. Rotondi voted "nay" on this bill.

State House news

Week of May 23-27

Key votes in the Massachusetts Legislature during the week of May 23-27 included approval of the redistricting plan and extension of the binding arbitration law for police and firemen. The arbitration law was scheduled to expire June 30.

Both Sen. Samuel Rotondi and Rep. Sherman W. Saltmarsh voted for the redistricting plan.

Sen. Rotondi opposed the binding arbitration extension; Rep. Saltmarsh voted for it. However, Saltmarsh did support a number of amendments which, had they passed, would have watered down the arbitration package.

Among those amendments was one which would have made the bill subject to local referendum; another would have made it subject to town meeting approval. A third amendment, also defeated, would have made minimum equipment manning a non-negotiable item not subject to arbitration.

In other action that week, the House gave initial approval to a bill rolling back auto insurance rates to their January, 1975 level and freezing them indefinitely. Rep. Saltmarsh voted against the freeze.

Initial approval was also given to a bill relieving local communities from being responsible for the tuition and transportation costs of high school graduates going to vocational school. Rep. Saltmarsh voted for approval.

In the Senate, Rotondi joined the majority in defeating, without any debate, an annually filed bill calling for uniform insurance rates across the state, abolishing the "territorial" system.

Week of May 30-June 3

During the week of May 30-June 3, debates in the House over the state budget saw sessions lasting to 3 a.m. After approving, among other things, a cut in the meals tax from eight to five percent; funding for a state employees and teachers pension program; and an amendment to require that 80 percent of any surplus revenue received by the state be turned over to cities and towns; the House gave initial approval to the $1.16 billion budget.

Rep. Saltmarsh voted in favor of all three of the amendments cited above. He also voted in favor of an amendment increasing the child support budget from $15.5-$1.8 million and adding 20 employees to the staff. This amendment passed.

In the Senate, Sen. Rotondi voted in favor of a motion to table the resolution urging the U.S. Congress to call a Constitutional Convention to consider a "right-to-life" amendment to the U.S. Constitution. The motion, however, was defeated, and the legislature subsequently became the ninth state to vote to call the convention.

The Senate also gave initial approval to legislation prohibiting discrimination against homosexuals in public employment. Sen. Rotondi voted with the majority in a close vote, 19-14.

By a 19-16 tally, the Senate approved a bill eliminating from divorce proceedings the defense, known as "condonation," that the action is invalid because acts used as grounds for the divorce were condoned by the accuser. Rotondi supported the bill.

Hearing tomorrow on education for disadvantaged kids

A public hearing on the education of the disadvantaged child will be held tomorrow from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in room 2003A of the John F. Kennedy Federal Building, Government Center, Boston.

The purpose of the hearing is to obtain comments and suggestions on the reauthorization of the Elementary and Secondary School Act, Title I and other significant portions of the Title. These recommendations will be used to formulate testimony by the council before the House Subcommittee on Elementary, Secondary and Vocational Education.

Issues to be discussed include: funding procedures; administrative requirements and practices; parental involvement; program coordination and concentration; state operated programs; and local program services.

Winchester has Title I programs operating in both Lynch and McCall Junior High Schools under the direction of Mildred Schwartzman.

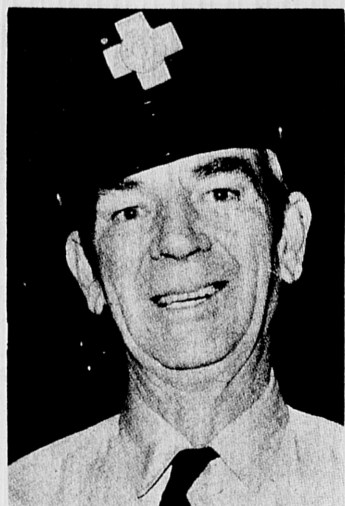

Written statements from those who cannot attend but want their opinions heard should be sent to: NACEDC, 425 13th St., NW, Suite 1012, Washington, DC, 20004.

Callahan retires after 31 years with fire department

James T. Callahan, known as Jimmy T. for the past 31 years, has retired from the fire department effective June 30. He served under three chiefs, beginning with James E. Callahan in 1946.

He was appointed May 5 that year and over the next 31 years he was a pump operator and a ladder truck driver. For more than 20 of those years he drove the ladder truck. During the Beggs and Cobb fire on Swanton street Callahan worked seven hours before relief came. Callahan, a well-liked and popular man at the station, served four years with the air force in World War II, serving in Europe where he accomplished many bombing missions over Germany. When films of fires are shown at the station, it is not unusual for one of the men to yell out, "There's Jimmy T."

Callahan, who has lived all his life in Winchester, was appointed acting lieutenant in May 1976 and retires with the rank of lieutenant. For the past three years he has been assigned to the west side station.

Start Small.

If you covet an Oriental rug, but your room is bigger than your budget, start with a small area rug instead.

Set off like a jewel on a polished floor, it enriches a room as no lesser covering can. While it enriches you in the bargain.

Because the value of a fine Oriental rug lasts as long as its beauty. The weave, yarns, dyes and infinity of hand-tied knots that make it a work of art, make it one of the most durable too. And now, as traditional weaving sources threaten to dry up and disappear, values are increasing more rapidly than ever.

So when your income eventually catches up with your good taste, you'll have a choice. You can add to your Oriental assets, or cash in your small rug and invest the capital gain in a larger one.

Our stock of Orientals ranges from 2' x 3' to 15' x 30' and from the treasured rugs of Persia to their newest rivals from India, China and Pakistan. In fact, our collection is considered one of the largest and finest in New England. So there's no better place than our showroom to start — and end — your search.

For the Japanese, this stillness of the past mingles with the present day. There is constant contrast and interest created by mixing of the old and new, the medieval countryside and the 20th century urban life. ★ Bellino named star of the week for his services in the victory (two touchdowns) the now-defunct Boston Post. That same year, (1953-4) Winchester won the Class B Basketball championship, with Joe an integral part.

In 1954-5 the basketball team again won the Class B championship, going 23-0 on the season. It was Joe Bellino's clutch jump-shooting which paced the Sachems to a 48-39 victory over Matignon in the final at Boston Garden. 1955 was a great year for Winchester, as the hockey team won the State championship in that sport the very next night.

During the '54 football season, Bellino's excellent play earned him a spot on the Boston Herald's All-Scholastic Football Team, when he was only a junior. He scored in every game the Sachems played that year, and finished with 95 points. Winchester lost the Class C championship to Woburn 18-13, however.

In Joe's senior year, the football team was undefeated, the season being capped with a tremendous, 28-20 win over archrival Woburn, the Tanners only loss over two seasons. The Herald described him as "one of the greatest clutch players in schoolboy ranks" and also named him the captain of their All-Scholastic team. With these accomplishments behind him Joe went to Navy.

"If I had to do it over again, I would say yes, I would go into the naval academy," Joe revealed. "They were four of the best years of my life." The naval academy would have to agree.

His first big claim to national fame came in his junior year, when the Winchester native scored his three touchdowns against Army. The next season would be one of headlines and national acclaim for the small, but deadly runner.

The Midshipmen's first game that year was against Boston College at the Heights. The local press played Joe's arrival up big, and he let his actions speak for themselves when it came time to play the game. The Boston headlines blared in bold type the Bellino feats: "JOE JET TISONS B.C., 22-7," "BELLINO SINKS B.C., 22-7," and the tell-all "BELLINO 22, B.C. 7." He had personally accounted for 20 points.

In the next game, Joe scored two TD's as Navy cawalked over Villanova, 41-7. Then against number three ranked Washington, Bellino scored his team's first touchdown and the Middies went on to a thrilling 16-15 win.

Bellino scored twice in a 28-7 romp over SMU, as Navy moved up to number six in the national rankings. Then Joe scored three times in the first half against Air Force as the Falcons were shot down, 35-3. Before that game Bellino had bet the academy's barber that he'd score three touchdowns, and if he didn't he could cut his hair any way he liked. Bellino was the one with the shears after that game.

Winchester's pride continued his barrage with two more scores in a 27-0 whitewashing of Pennsylvania. Then he scored both of Navy's touchdowns in a tight 14-7 victory over Notre Dame before 63,000 at Philadelphia Stadium. Finally the unbeaten string was snapped, as the Middies blew a 10-0 halftime lead to Duke and lost, 19-10. It was the only game he wouldn't score in that season.

Virginia was the team unfortunate enough to be next on Navy's schedule and suffered the consequences. With Joe scoring four touchdowns the Middies rolled a 41-6 win. Finally it was time for Army once again.

Three hundred persons from Winchester made the trip to Philadelphia to witness, the classic, including Joe's parents and brothers and sisters. He didn't let them, or any of the other 98,616 fans on hand, down.

In addition to scoring the game's first touchdown, it was his pass interception which stopped a frantic Army drive late in the fourth quarter as Navy won, 17-12. With the win, the military school was voted to participate in the Orange Bowl classic against Missouri. Three days later, he was awarded the Heisman Trophy, as an overwhelming choice.

Despite a fantastic catch by Bellino for a late touchdown, Navy lost to Missouri in the Orange Bowl, 21-14. Over 1000 fans from Winchester were present for the Classic. "You don't play for yourself," Joe told us, "you play for someone else - you give an effort for your friends, for your family. That, I think, over and above dedication and effort on the practice field is what the key to my success was. I gave a little better effort when I know someone's behind me. I was very appreciative of the fact that so many people in Winchester kept track of what I was doing, and came to cheer me on at the Orange Bowl."

After his incomparable college football career, Joe served his term in the navy. We asked him whether or not he felt that he could've been as good in the pros as he'd been in college, if he had been able to play right after his graduation.

"Back in 1960," Joe related, "when I played football, there was basically one league, of 12 teams - the N.F.L. Then in '61 they opened up this 'playground' for a lot of athletes with the A.F.L."

"I think, with that in mind, that yes, my chances of playing would have been good," he said. When Joe finally returned to football, as a 27-year-old rookie with the Boston Patriots, he still had the ability but unfortunately the Pats didn't use him to his best ability.

"A player with a certain ability has got to go to a team that will use that ability. Mike Garret is a good example from KC," Joe explained. "He had a lot of success as a scabbard who played behind a big line. The Patriots, on the other hand, had designs for a big back, they had very little diversity offensively. I was in the wrong situation at the time."

"So you can see a guy can be a star in college and not in the pros depending on what team he's on," Joe concluded.

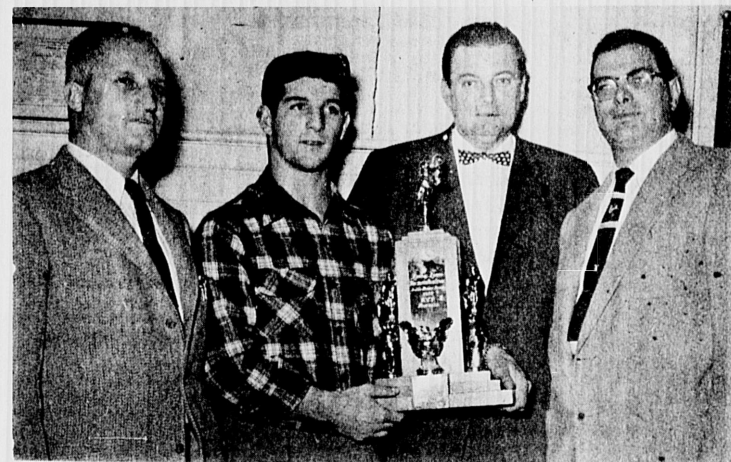

Currently Joe has several successful businesses in Wilmington and coaches St. Columbkille's in Brookline. "I enjoyed that," he said, "but I wasn't used to losing." St. Columbkille's finished the year with a 3-5 record. He took personal satisfaction in the fact that every boy who started the season finished it except for four that got injured. "I like working with kids, from the third grade on."

His own children, Theresa, 14, and John, 10, were "very happy" with his election to the Hall of Fame. "My children over the past few years have gotten to understand some of the awards that I got in college," he told us. "I think now they appreciate the election."

Winchester's Joe Bellino, to the end a modest, gracious, human being. There is no greater success story than that of the hometown boy doing well.

(Author's Note: I would like to take the time to thank both Tony "Moose" Bellino and "Couch" Henry Knowlton for all their help in the research work for this article. Their patience and willingness to lend valuable personal property was of great help. — Rick Pearl.)

The year is 1955, and even then Joe Bellino was winning awards. Here he accepts the WHS Most Valuable Football Player Award from his coach Henry Knowlton (left), Mr. Hill and Mr. Penta.

Little League All-Star teams set district tourney games

Schedules for the 1977 District 13 Little League and Senior League All-Star Tournaments have been announced by District Administrator George Berardi. All week-day games will begin at 5:45 P.M. and Saturday games at 2:00 p.m. at the District level of play.

The tournaments will begin in Winchester on Monday when the Winchester National Senior League team takes on the Colonial League All-Stars on the Skillings road field. If the Winchester team wins this one it will play away from home against the winner of a first round Lexington vs. Sudbury game on July 20. The Winchester American League Senior team will meet the Wilmington All-Stars at Wilmington on July 18, and if successful play Assabet Valley on July as the visitors.

Both of the Winchester Major League teams drew first round byes, so All-Star Major League District Tournament play will begin in Winchester on July 19 with a home game at Ginn Field pitting the Winchester American League All-Stars against the Woburn East team, while the National League team takes on Woburn Central the same day in Woburn. If successful the National League team will be home at Ginn Field against the winner of a Wakefield American vs. Arlington South second round game on Thursday, and the American League team would meet the winner of the Wakefield National vs. Lexington West game on the same date away.

Blazers end softball season 10-0

The Blazers finished on top of the girls softball season with an outstanding record of ten wins and no losses. They beat the Panthers in two playoff games to go undefeated. The Panthers tried to stop them, but some fine pitching by Allison Chase and good fielding by Pat Hudson, Wiggy Bradshaw, and Jean Olivadoti slowed them down. Dara Fitzgerald and Namoya Nelson did heads-up base-running to keep it close.

For the Panthers, Joyce Gibbons and Elaine Pigott were the two main pitchers, and Caroline Twomey and Kathy Looney made some great plays, but the Panthers couldn't stop the Blazers.

At the playgrounds...

Rec. field trips start this Friday

Recreation field trips begin this Friday with Ginn and Leonard Field going to Canobie Lake Park, Salem, N.H. and Westside & McDonald Fields and Arts & Crafts going to the USS Constitution, Freedom Museum and Bunker Hill Pavilion.

The Canobie Lake trip leaves Town Hall at 11 a.m. and returns at 4 p.m. The Constitution trip leaves at 10:30 a.m. and returns at 2 p.m. On July 22 the trips will be reversed, with Ginn and Leonard going to the Constitution and Westside, McDonald & Arts & Crafts going to Canobie Lake Park. The departures and arrivals will be at the same times.

On the days of all field trips, all town playgrounds and arts & crafts will not be staffed. Children must be eight years old to attend a trip unless accompanied by an adult. All buses leave and depart from Town Hall. Children are advised to wear a shirt with "Winchester" on it.

Registration for any Town trip on any playground "special event" may be made at any Town playground, at the Arts & Crafts classes at the High School, or at the Winchester Sport Shop and the recreation office at the Town Hall.

Baseball A teams

In the first week of Winchester Recreation baseball, the Westside Red Sox managed only one win in three games. The Westside A team lost to the Leonard A team by a score of 9-1. Timely hitting and pitching was the downfall of the Westsiders.

McDonald Field began their defense of their two year championship by soundly whipping both Leonard and Ginn Fields last week. Under Jerry "Dick Williams" Ferro, McDonald has fought their way to back-to-back championships the past two summers. Now, just like the Oakland A's of 1974, they are attempting a third successive championship under a new coach, Rich "Alvin Dark" Spellman.

McDonald opened the season with an 11-1 romp over Leonard. The first inning control problems of Leonard pitcher Ron Dokus led to five McDonald runs on just three hits and three more tallies on two hits in the fourth. Similar problems plagued reliever Bob "Journeyman" Cooke, playing for his third field in as many years, and McDonald got three more runs on no hits in the fifth. While no one person was outstanding at the plate for McDonald, credit should be given to Eddie Pratt, who pitched four innings of one-hit, shutout ball.

The second game of the week featured a rematch between last year's finalists, McDonald and Ginn. McDonald handled Ginn much easier than in last year's playoffs. Guy Cafferella pitched a steady game and was supported ably by a 14 hit barrage that produced 10 runs. Paul Marchall, "Binky" Bradley and Fran Murray had two hit apiece and Murray also homered. Ginn gave it a gutsy try, scoring four runs in the top of the first and adding one more in the fifth. Brad Cowen and Richie Montori pitched ably but just did not have enough support in the field. Offensively Cowen, Ben Atkinson, Gary Stuart, and third baseman Mike Moros looked good for Ginn as did Kevin Scully who came up to the A team at the tail end of last year and seems to have earned a regular position in 1977.

Middlesex offers clerical training

The Widening Opportunity Research Center, Middlesex Community College, will offer the third year offer the clerical training and retraining program. This program is designed to assist students in gaining the required skills and confidence to enter or reenter the business world.

College credit courses, such as typing, business communication, and A.B.C. shorthand, will be offered along with workshops focusing on employment goals and job seeking skills. Career counseling, and a work practicum will be included in the two semester, certificate program which will begin in September.

A valuable aspect of this program is the supportive environment. Courses offered are limited to clerical training and retraining students, enabling them to begin working as a group toward their mutual goal - part-time or full-time employment. The many services of WORC assist the students in this endeavor.

For an appointment to receive an application and more information on the Clerical Training and Retraining Program, contact WORC, Division of Continuing Education, Middlesex Community College, Bedford.

Twilight league soccer team 5-0

Winchester has entered the suburban twilight soccer league for the fourth straight season. The team has been quite successful so far this year with a 5-0 undefeated record. It has been organized by Bob Salvucci, who is player-coach. There is no age limit in this league, making the competition very high. The Winchester players consist mostly of a combination of college players, ex-college players and a couple of high school standouts.

REAL ESTATE VS DOW JONES

When we compare the results over the past decade between stock market profits and real estate increases, we'll see quite a dramatic difference in dollars.

In the decade from January 1960, to January 1970, the Dow Jones Industrial average jumped from 688 to 800 — an increase of 16 percent in ten years. During the same ten-year period, the average home price increased from $18,307 to $27,022 — an appreciation of 48 percent or triple the Dow.

By January, 1977, the Dow Jones average jumped to the 1,000 level for a 16-year appreciation of 45 percent while home prices continued to increase faster than the cost of living to $46,000 — up 150 percent since 1960.

No matter how you slice the cake, an investment in real estate over the past decade has proven to more than double the stock market increase. And the trend is widening in favor of real estate.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at ANN BLACKHAM & CO., 11 Thompson St., Winchester. Phone 729-1663. We're here to help!

Local organist in Nantucket concert

John Skelton of Andover, the organist for the First Congregational Church in Winchester, has been chosen, along with his wife, to play a dual recital on Nantucket July 23.

The recital is to be in honor of the father of New England organ building, William Goodrich, on his 200th birthday.

The first recital will be given at 2 p.m. on an organ built by Thomas Appleton, one of Goodrich's early apprentices. Carolyn Skelton, instructor in organ and harpsichord at Phillips Academy, will play at the Centre Street Methodist Church.

The Goodrich Organ at the Unitarian Church will be played at 3 p.m. by Mrs. Skelton's husband, who is a member of the faculties of the University of New Hampshire and Lowell University. Pipe organ historians, organists, and organ builders are expected to gather on Nantucket for the celebration. The recitals are free and open to the public.

Dr. Niblock retiring

A reverence for education

In the Winchester schools, as in any school system, there are history teachers, math teachers, guidance counselors, reading specialists, a whole variety of professionals suited to particular jobs. Then you have Howard Niblock.

After 21 years as an administrator in the Winchester schools, W. Howard Niblock, 64, decided to retire this year. From 1956-1970 he served as principal of the high school; from 1970 on he held the post of director of pupil services.

Grey-haired and soft-spoken, he adheres to traditional values and at the same time takes an eclectic view of education. As director of pupil services, he has been responsible for a wide range of specialized services for Winchester's school children, from pre-school screening to vocational counseling for high school students. Until Winchester hired a coordinator for special education (Chapter 766) programs, Niblock handled that load as well.

"My concern is for the total development of young people," states Dr. Niblock. He believes it takes more than academic and vocational skill to get by in the world: "Personal and social skills are more a measure of success than academic achievement. . . I have a very strong feeling that education is not going to be truly effective unless we do address ourselves to the personal and social skills of our kids."

And the "we's" means more than the schools: school is merely one agency in education, along with parents and the community, says Dr. Niblock. Having lived what he calls "a very stringent childhood," he has come to understand the importance of these various agencies. He also sees adversity as a vital part of life, providing a framework within which one can make value judgments.

One thing he often sees lacking in the worldly education of our youth is responsibility: "I get the impression that young people go a long way down the road before they get to any real responsibility." It can be tough, he admits, but it teaches you how to take the harsher side of life.

If responsibility is the acid test, Dr. Niblock scored pretty well. He was born in Dorchester, an only child of a salesman and a nurse; his father died when he was about eight years old. His mother moved with him to Lynn, where an aunt took care of him while his mother worked. When old enough, he too had to work all the time.

"You might say I grew old too fast," says Dr. Niblock of his childhood.

He fared well at Lynn Classical High School and won a scholarship from the Lydia Pinkham Company; with it he went to Bowdoin College and earned a BS cum laude. He was and still is an athletic man: at Bowdoin he set a national indoor record in the shot put that held up for four or five years; and today he plays tennis and basketball regularly. "I owe a lot to athletics," he says, reflecting again the view that there's more to school than books. Of course, his scholarship came about, at least partially as a result of his achievements in sports.

His education continued at Harvard, where he earned an MA in psychology and a masters of education in secondary school administration. The doctoral title is honorary, awarded by Nasson and Bowdoin Colleges as a doctor of humane letters.

For the next 20 years, from 1936-1956, Dr. Niblock taught and worked as an administrator in private schools, at Mount Hermon School, Beaver Country Day School, and at the Maine Central Institute in Pittsfield, Me. He also carried jobs at the University of Maine-Orono during summer sessions; at Boston University; and at Tufts University.

He is an overseer emeritus for Bowdoin; a past president of the New England Association of Schools and Colleges; a member of the area board of the Mystic Valley Mental Health Center; and, another job he likes to talk about, past president of the Mass. Council for the Humanities (MCH).

While with the MCH, he helped prepare printed and visual material for schools and helped in the attempt to adapt television and film to educational purposes. In the ten years he worked with the MCH, they produced numerous educational films, including filmed versions of plays — Oedipus, Our Town, a little Shakespeare. Though he found television, by virtue of scheduling problems, too hard to adapt to the classroom, the film projects were more successful.

But now that he looks back on it, Dr. Niblock cautions that the use of electronic media should have its limits. "I'm concerned that education becomes too easy," he says, adding that sometimes education is a "laborious process," and perhaps it should be that way. After all, no one pretends that life is as easy to grasp as a movie.

Dr. W. Howard Niblock

In 1968, Dr. Niblock was one of 25 principals who traveled to Europe to study foreign school systems. They visited Russia, Romania, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Denmark and England, and even then Dr. Niblock found some profound differences, especially between the Eastern European countries and the US.

In Europe there was "an intense pursuit of learning." One could see in Europe "how critical education is to their success." By contrast, Dr. Niblock feels we don't have to work very hard in the States to ensure we get an education, adding, "the incentives for that education have largely disappeared."

The result is, for many students in the US school seems artificial, unrelated to "real life." Despite his traditional views, Dr. Niblock is enthusiastic about alternative educational programs, such as the MaxEd and CLIP programs at the high school.

These types of programs expose students to situations which are "not contrived, but honest, real-life situations." He happily repeats what a student once told him, when asked about the student volunteer program. The student said, "It makes school seem worth worthwhile."

Dr. Niblock also talks about the increasing responsibility taken on by the school system for the total education of the child. He finds implementation of Chapter 766 particularly frustrating.

"We are developing in Winchester an awareness of the immensity of this thing," he worries about the "priority of the teacher and the taught."

With the tremendous increase in mandated legislation, and regulations, we have to be really concerned about staffing, if teachers are really going to teach. Administrators have to organize and take on much of the responsibilities; and administrative staffing has to be adequate to implement 766 properly. The more you reduce necessary staffing, the more burden you place on teachers, who are after all the most important in the system."

Niblock says the schools were not prepared to handle Chapter 766; other social agencies, by virtue of changes in legislation, "have dumped this stuff on the schools."

Not that the schools shouldn't be trying to deal with special education problems. "I'm asking for a more realistic level of expectation," explains Dr. Niblock. He compares 766 to another expansive social program: urban renewal. The caution is not to build too quickly and end up tearing the whole program down in the end.

The size of the task involved with special education is demanding: the need for individual attention is so great it puts pressures on the rest of the educational system.

"I see a growing reluctance on the part of school systems and municipalities to properly

Subsidized housing for the elderly may come before board of appeals

The proposed development of high-rise, partly subsidized housing for the elderly and-or moderate income families at Waterfield and Rangeley roads may come before the board of appeal for a hearing to allow construction.

At a joint meeting of the planning board and selectmen last Wednesday, planning board members Charles Tseckares and Otto Schaefer, and chairman Joseph Geary, gave their views on the housing proposed by Boston Investment and Development Corporation. Arthur D. Ulian of BIDC filed an application with the Department of Housing and Urban Development for assistance in building 190 dwelling units in two apartment buildings. When Ulian presented his case to the planning board on June 20, the number of units was reduced to 156. There were indications last week that the number would be further reduced to 112.

The rentals proposed were $396 a month for one bedroom and $467 for two bedrooms. There was considerable discussion Wednesday about the rental rates, the number of parking spaces, and the number of units proposed. Some selectmen thought the rents appeared high for elderly housing, the parking spaces too few, and the number of units too dense.

Under Chapter 774, if a developer is unable to obtain local approval for a housing project for low or moderate income housing, he can apply to the Department of Community Affairs and the state can subsequently override the local zoning bylaw. The board of appeal could, however, approve a project contingent on certain conditions being met. The developer would then have to decide between meeting the restrictions or appealing to the Department of Community Affairs.

Chapter 774 is the so-called snob zoning law. The land involved in this proposed construction is zoned residential.

Tseckares noted that he felt it would be in the best interests of Winchester to attract a good developer if the town wanted this kind of housing. He added that under Section 8 criteria, the project would have to meet more stringent requirements than the current state building code sets. After 20 years, however, the controls over a Section 8 project no longer apply.

The planning board members suggested to selectmen that it would probably be in the town's interest to have only 25 to 50 percent of the units subsidized rather than 100 percent. Otherwise, the board said, the developer, knowing he could fill his building, would have less incentive to construct an attractive project.

Schaefer commented that in general housing of the kind proposed is desirable for the town but that it appears the two projects now under the jurisdiction of the housing authority may be meeting the needs of the low income families and some moderate income families. He said that additional subsidized housing might be better designed to meet the needs of moderate income families. He further said that the units should not be exclusively designated for use by the elderly, but ought to perhaps include young families who cannot find apartments in Winchester within their economic reach.

Selectmen have until July 28 to respond to HUD's invitation to comment on the proposals. The planning board suggested that selectmen consider indicating that a development of not more than 100 units would be more desirable for this site.

One of the concerns expressed by neighbors at the planning board meeting June 20 was repeated Wednesday Selectmen Edward F. O'Connell, who questioned whether the construction would change the character of the Rangeley road-Rangeley ridge section of town. Suggestions were made that if this project were to go ahead conditions should be attached to assure the continuing residential character of the neighborhood.

Three years ago an effort was made by Nicholas Fitzgerald, owner of the property, to bulldoze the land in an attempt to construct an apartment building.

Neighbors at that time picketed the bulldozers and an injunction was successfully filed by Constantine Alexander, a lawyer living on Ravine road. Alexander is currently chairman of the board of appeal.

Having finished talking about the Rangeley area, the planning board and selectmen discussed the state of the RB-20 study committee looking into apartment zoning. Planning board Chairman Geary said that the board would most likely not be prepared to make a presentation to a special summer town meeting.

Schaefer commented that the results of study so far indicate that height and lot coverage in the present RB-20 zone were restrictive to the point where the property will not be developed. To make development possible, the committee worked out a preliminary report indicating proposed zoning amendments.

Section 1 would increase the maximum height permitted for a structure on a sliding scale so that the larger the lot size, the higher the permitted maximum height of the structure.

Section 2 would reward a developer for constructing sheltered or covered parking lots by permitting increased floor area for the building depending on the number of sheltered parking spaces designed into the project.

Section 3 would encourage the use of larger lots or assembling lots so that a more attractive and economically feasible building could be constructed.

Section 4 would attempt to relate the parking standards to the anticipated number of occupants of the building instead of to the size of the building.

Section 5 would establish tighter standards for off-street parking.

Section 6 would define "den" in such a way as to sure that a den did not become an additional bedroom within a dwelling unit.

Schaefer added that the report is not complete and that other aspects of apartment zoning are under consideration. He specifically mentioned the possibility of exempting one unit from the density count of the building to encourage provision of an on-site superintendent.

There was also some discussion between the two boards about mixing stores or offices with apartments within the same structure. Geary of the planning board suggested that mixed uses in some areas such as existing buildings in the center might be desirable. Selectmen Chairman Barbara S. Hankins noted that if this type of zoning were eventually approved and if the mini-mall being planned by the savings bank on the site of the former theater proceeded, there could be mixed uses in that part of town — apartments on one side of the street and commercial uses on the other.

Drowning man revived at poolside by local nurse's aide

A combination of luck, good training and quick response saved the life of Salvatore J. Dantes Saturday.

Dantes, 51, of 219 Forest st., apparently fell into a swimming pool and drowned around 8:40 Saturday evening. His son Roger and neighbors Donald McKenzie and Mark Troisi pulled him out; he was unconscious.

Mrs. Marjorie McKenzie of 17 Forest cir., Donald's mother, was called to the scene by her son and immediately began administering mouth-to-mouth and chest resuscitation to Dantes. Mrs. McKenzie is a trained medical technician and a nurse's aide at Symmes Hospital. Mrs. McKenzie said when she arrived, Dantes "was blue; he had no pulse, no heartbeat."

An ambulance was called, and by the time they arrived, Dantes was breathing again. Firefighters William Duran, John Farrell and John Nash Jr., all emergency medical technicians, applied oxygen and took Dantes to Winchester Hospital. The resuscitation had worked, and Dantes was later released.

Mrs. McKenzie said she had taken a course in CPR at Symmes, thinking it would be a good training to have. "I never thought I'd have to use it," she said. "And I'm glad I knew what to do."

Also responding to the scene was policeman Franklin Bartlett, also an EMT.

Police arrest four youths on assault charges

Several residents were arrested in the past week for leaving the scene of an accident and driving under the influence of alcohol. Several more were brought into the police station for protective custody. There were also four arrests for idle and disorderly conduct and assault and battery on police officers.

Officers Manzie, Morgan, Pearson, and Yeannopolis responded to a call about a loud group on north Main street at 5:30 Saturday morning. According to Chief John P. McHugh, the officers asked the group to disperse. They did, but an hour later the officers were called back. Once again the young people left the area. At 7:05 there was another call, but this time the group did not leave.

The group began to spit on the cruiser and to use foul language at the officers, the chief said. The police arrested William Swymer 21 and Stephen Swymer 19, both of 40 Rumford st., James Sullivan, 19, of 8 Hill st., and Scott McNutt, 18, of Medford.

Frank G. Cavaretta, 18, of 27 Hinds rd. was charged with leaving the scene and driving under the influence after an accident Sunday at Wildwood street and Woodside road. He was arrested at 2:35 on Cabot street.

There was an accident Saturday at 230 Main st., where the car driven by Jeffrey Davis, 19, of 50 Johnson rd. hit a stone wall and knocked over street signs at Symmes st. Davis was arrested and charged with leaving the scene and driving under.

A 16-year-old girl was charged with driving without a license and driving under the influence when the car she was operating struck two parked cars on Squanto road Monday.

Woodside road was the scene of another accident last week when a car struck a telephone pole Friday. Three boys ran from the car after it struck the pole.

There was an arrest Friday when Officers Anselmo and Jackson spotted a truck stolen from Carolina Trucking Company in Stoneham. John M. King, 24, of Allston was charged with the theft. There were several housebreaks this week. On July 12 an Arlington street house was entered through the forced front door. Various items were taken.

Two breaks were reported on July 17. A cellar door was forced on a Woodside road house. The only item reported missing so far is an umbrella vase. Two rugs were stolen from a Cambridge street house. Entrance was gained through broken glass on the second floor porch door.

The next day a Reservoir street residence was entered through a porch screen. Jewelry, and hunting and pocket knives were reported taken.

Monday night silverware was reported missing from a south Main street residence where the front door was discovered open. A Church street home was entered that afternoon through a forced rear door. Jewelry and silver were reported missing.

At 4:15 a.m. Monday an East Boston man covered with blood walked into the center where he was found by police. He said that he had picked up four men in Revere and given them a ride to Sandy Beach where they asked to stop. According to the man, he was beaten and his rented car stolen. From Sandy Beach he said he walked to the center. Chief McHugh says that the MDC police have been notified.

At 11:20 Monday night a group of more than ten youths was dispersed from the Muraco School front yard.

Local firm aides Red Cross plans for disaster relief

The American Alarm and Communications, Inc., of 573 Main St., through its president, Richard Sampson, has given the Winchester Chapter of Red Cross a generous supply of toilet articles for use by the disaster committee in the "Comfort kits" that the committee is preparing.

Justin O'Connor, chairman of the local Red Cross Disaster Committee, in thanking Sampson for the gift, said, "The Chapter must be ready for any emergency - hoping that its services will never be needed. But when disaster strikes - a family home is burned out, for instance - we must be ready to provide life's necessities for the unfortunate victims."

The Chapter is in the process of renewing its disaster equipment explained Chairman O'Connor. Stretches, cots, blankets, linens and new toilet articles such as toothpaste, toothbrushes, razors, razor blades, soap, etc., all should be updated to put the local Red Cross in a position to help meet the needs of Winchesterites in any possible disaster - with the hope that the equipment will never be used.

The Red Cross personnel to get in touch with for information about the disaster renewal program are Justin O'Connor, 729-4577 or Mary Fowle, executive director of the Winchester Red Cross, 729-2300.

The Next Move, an improvisational theater group from Boston, was out for their annual visit to see an old friend and supporter, Mrs. Carlene Samoiloff of Highland Avenue. The group is currently performing "Emma" at their theater at the Institute of Contemporary Art on Boylston Street. They will also do an improvisational review at the Prudential Center Monday at 7 p.m. as part of the center's "Summer Showcase." At the lunch table are, from left, Nancy Warnock, a director with Winchester's Children's Theatre; Steve Warnock; Lanie Zera; Mrs. Samoiloff; Ed Butler; Thalia McMillan; Martin Anderson, Karen MacDonald and Gerri Librandi, all three of whom have worked with the children's theater in Winchester. 'A new dimension'

Winchester Hospital using sound waves for heart exams

Echo-cardiography, the use of high-pitched, non-invasive sound waves to examine the heart, is now being done at Winchester Hospital.

The examinations are being performed by Eugene W. Green Jr., MD, a heart specialist from Louisville General Hospital, Louisville, Ky., who recently joined the hospital's medical staff.

Echo-cardiography makes use of sound waves to examine the heart in much the same way sonar is used to detect objects underwater. Often used in the diagnosis of heart murmur and congenital heart disease, echo-cardiography provides information about the size of the heart, the movement of valves, and the heart's muscle structure. "It's like being able to do an examination from inside the heart," Dr. Green explained.

Dr. Green is a specialist in heart examination using this new procedure. "Echo-cardiography is a valuable technique," he commented. "There is no pain or discomfort involved, and since we are using ordinary sound waves to examine the heart, there is no risk to the patient." The examination is also low cost, reproducible, and portable, -- it can be done at the patient's bedside if he cannot be moved.

"Because the technique yields such precise information about the heart, echo-cardiography adds a new dimension to the findings of the other types of heart examination available at the Hospital," added Dr. Green.

Dr. Green received fellowships in cardiology at the University of Cincinnati and at the University of Louisville. He received his MD from Columbia Medical School and served his internship and residency at Barnes Hospital in St. Louis and Ohio State University Hospital in Columbus. He has been affiliated with Winchester Medical Associates on Washington Street.

Mopeds included in MDC prohibition

The Metropolitan District Commission has issued a reminder that all recreational vehicles are prohibited from MDC parks and reservations except on roadways specifically designated for automobile traffic.

"We feel we must emphasize this rule," said MDC Commissioner John F. Snedeker, "because some people are under the impression that 'off-road' motorized recreational vehicles are permitted in areas from which automobiles are banned. This is not true."

The ruling applies to such vehicles as dune-buggies, campers, trail bikes, motorcycles, mini-bikes, mopeds and snowmobiles. Commissioner Snedeker said that MDC police have been instructed to make sure the prohibition of recreational vehicles is strictly enforced at all parks, reservations and beaches. Operators of mopeds in particular have been consistent violators of the rules governing MDC recreational areas.

Letters to the editor on any subject of interest to Winchester residents are welcome. They should be typed and not exceed 250 words. All letters must be signed with name and address and a telephone number. Names will be held on request. Deadline for letters is 5 p.m. Monday.

Firemen's union elects officers

Winchester's local firefighters union, Local 1564 of the International Association of Firefighters, has chosen new officers in recent elections, effective July 1.

John Regan was chosen president, to replace Joseph Riga. Vice president is Kevin Yore; secretary-treasurer is John Nash Jr., and the three directors are Joseph Riga, William O'Leary, and Herbert Cogan.

Evaluations on school board's Monday agenda

The Winchester School Committee will hold its July meeting Monday evening at the Sanborn House, starting at 7:30.

The most controversial item coming up under old business is the report on teacher evaluations to be presented by Assistant Superintendent Walter Gleason. Gleason formed a study committee at the behest of the school board when it became apparent there was much dissatisfaction with the present method of teacher evaluation.

The study committee, made up of two teachers, two principals, and Gleason, is to recommend slight changes in the evaluation forms instituted this past year for the evaluation of teacher performance.

Another report from Dr. Gleason will focus on state funding of public education. And there will be a curriculum report on the results of progress under Title I for the past year.

Also on the agenda are: a school committee report on conference time in the English program; election of a delegate and alternate to the MASC-MASS annual meeting; personnel and business matters and a student report.

Off. Jasper Asaro receives NU degree

Winchester Police Patrolman Jasper F. Asaro has received an associate degree in law enforcement from Northeastern University. Officer Asaro, who resides at 83 Harvard st. with his wife, Kathleen, and their son, Jasper Jr., has been on the Winchester force for 11 years.

Serving The Community For Over 95 Years

School survey revealing

The Massachusetts Department of Education recently released the results of the third phase of their state-wide educational assessment survey, and the findings lead to some interesting conclusions.

The survey was conducted among 8000 9 and 17-year-olds in 338 public schools in 169 cities and towns throughout the state. Students were asked their views on general school climate and assessed on their knowledge, understanding, and appreciation of various academic subjects, including science, ecology, and consumer skills.

Perhaps the most significant finding was that, by and large, administrators, principals, teachers, and support staff have a higher regard for their schools and how they operate than do the students.

While it is a tradition dating at least as far back as Huck Finn for school children to express their dislike for book-learning, this finding points to a more widespread and current problem. With the pleasures of affluence so readily available to our youth, and with jobs so hard to come by even with that magic diploma (or degree), the value of an education and its relevance to real-life situations is brought into question.

Winchester is perhaps more fortunate than most communities in this respect: the MaxEd and CLIP programs at the high school provide some of that real-life experience in the context of a learning environment. A dose of responsibility can go a long way in shaping one's attitudes toward life.

In the area of consumer skills, the survey makes some curious observations about students' abilities and their relationship to the media. The survey states:

"Most 9-year-olds who often watch Saturday morning television do not do as well in consumer areas as those reported not watching Saturday morning television often. For 17-year-olds, some exposure to the media appears to help them. Those who watch little or no television news do not perform as well as 17-year-olds who watch it more frequently. Similarly, those who read most of the newspaper almost every day do somewhat better than more who report never reading the newspaper. Those who read a national news magazine at least once a week score higher than those who never read a magazine."

Children watch a lot of television, and there can be no doubt that the medium has a profound influence on the values of youth — and adults. And unlike parents and teachers, television demands no feedback: it dictates its values, often with relentless repetition. Children spend as much time in front of the tube as they do in school — and that may explain a lot more than we suspect.

For those who believe the controversy over equal education for boys and girls centers around the right to play baseball: the report states that boys score higher than girls in almost all areas of the science testing. Since they share the same classrooms, the source of this inequality must run deeper than schooling. Equal opportunity isn't something to be merely handed over, like a gift — it has to be built in to the social system, which means it's going to take a long time.

Finally, testing in ecology and environmental studies makes for some interesting reflections on how we in America deal with those issues.

The report first comments that, "Most students in both age groups believe that environmental problems facing the nation are dangerous." The survey also finds that the more students perceive environmental problems to be dangerous, the better they can understand the relationship man has with his environment. This aspect of their education seems to have been effective.

But the survey also makes this conclusion: "Massachusetts 17-year-olds say they are willing to change their lifestyles because of the national energy crisis but seem not willing to back up those beliefs with concrete action."

Noble precepts about life and stacks of statistics certainly serve a purpose; but students learn as much by example as anything else. If students are concerned about environmental and energy problems but unwilling to act, perhaps it is because they have few models to follow. In this respect, teachers and parents, the community and the media all have an important role to play.

To quote an old precept: Action speaks louder than words. —DKF.

State House roll call

The House
Week of June 20-24

The House this week first approved (109-108) and then rejected (115-105) an amendment to the auto insurance rebate bill. The amendment would have the registrar of motor vehicles appoint a director of the merit rating board which would be a division of the registry of motor vehicles.

Supporters argued this would remedy the current confusing, unworkable, and inoperative setup of the board which has trouble getting together and has conflicting views. They also noted the merit rating board is a key to good and fair insurance rates and the smooth functioning of the board is essential.

Opponents, Representative Sherman W. Saltmarsh, Jr., among them, said the current board members should get together; others disagreed with the registrar's appointing the director; some claimed the appointment would be non-civil service, leading to politics and the dangers involved with the consumer losing in the end.

In other roll call actions, the House, in a surprise move, scrapped the auto insurance rebate bill and replaced it, 181-34, with a new bill rolling back and freezing rates indefinitely at the 1975 level.

Many supporters claimed this would send the insurance industry and the Senate a message that the House is serious about rate relief, particularly in the five percent cap on rate increases it passed, which the Senate changed to 25 percent. Saltmarsh voted for the roll back to 1975 rates. The House later on a voice vote rejected the roll back and passed a new version of the rebate bill.

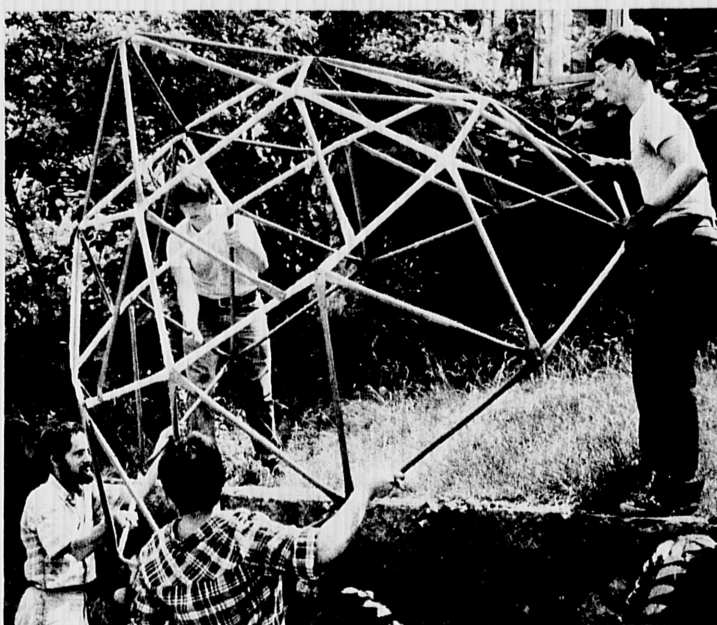

House Bill 6166 was rejected 165-60 and thus Maynard was denied authorization to withdraw from the MBTA. Supporters noted that Maynard joined the MBTA system in 1967 and was served by ten buses for $3300 a year, yet now service has been entirely discontinued while the annual cost has risen to $124,000.

Opponents, including Saltmarsh, pointed out that other communities would have to assume Maynard's assessment and that the transportation committee, of which Saltmarsh is a member, is working on major legislation revamping the MBTA.

By a vote of 137-85 the House refused to reconsider its previous passage of a bill authorizing a local parking excise tax.

Pictorial editorial

The Emmeneau family of Pine Grove park no longer needed this climbing dome and rather than discard it, they found a very worthwhile cause to help — the ABC House. The house is having its first yard sale to raise some money for badly needed repairs to the house. Assisting Tom and Carolyn Ward in setting up and storing yard sale items, are two young people working under the newly formed Winchester Youth Job Clearing House. Mark Krikorian and Jerry Kenney applied to employment, the ABC House needed someone, and they got together. The yard sale date is October 8, but Carolyn Ward is collecting items NOW. Give her a call if you have something to donate. Ms. Ward lives at 16 Myrtle St.

Letters from readers

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I would have thought that a community-minded newspaper like the Winchester Star, which displayed a photo of a lovely chitric blossom on page 1 (July 14), and thoughtfully asked residents to conserve our precious water resources would have demonstrated better judgment than to have sold two entire pages (or 10 per cent) of its issue to the promotion of cigarette smoking, a noxious and dangerous practice without defense anywhere. Shame on The Star!

Yours respectfully,
Robert Mirak

(Editor's Note: For a number of years The Star rejected cigarette advertising outright until it was sharply pointed out to us that our defense of others' right to advertise and free speech (in the cases of gun and X-rated movie advertising) was clearly inconsistent. We relented and agreed to accept cigarette advertising placed through a national association of suburban newspapers because we do believe that our role is simply as a conduit of information. It is up to each consumer to decide whether or not to buy.)

Poems & cigarettes

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Last week I submitted for publication an original poem in memory of my beloved nephew, Paul A. Ryan, who passed away one year ago. I was told by the editor that it was the policy of The Star not to print poems due to lack of space.

Upon receiving last week's paper I found a two full-page ad for cigarettes and numerous ads for liquor. I am sure The Star is well paid for these ads and I was more than willing to pay for the poem, which would have meant so much to the many relatives and friends who loved Paul so dearly. The Woburn Times was very pleased to publish it at a very minimal charge.

We don't need poems to remember him, but The Star sure needs to print articles which help people feel better, rather than ads to destroy them.

6 Highland Ave.

(Editor's note: It is indeed the policy of The Star not to run poetry; we have enough news coming in to preclude our becoming a literary as well as a news paper. However, The Star has no objection to running a memorial poem as a paid advertisement. The poem was not printed as such because of a misunderstanding, rather than any conscious effort to exclude it from the paper.)

A dream realized

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Our volunteer organization, the Middlesex Canal Association, has looked on with enormous admiration and pride at the great initiative the Woburn Historical Commission and the Woburn Canal Society have taken in restoring the old Middlesex Canal towpath by the Baldwin Mansion and in constructing and manning an authentic replica of an old Packet boat and bringing to the public a long sought after dream...that of riding the Old Middlesex canal in a horse drawn packet boat.

We are also thrilled at the fine initiative they have taken to bring legislation to preserve the entire canal (as far as is at present feasible) along its route from Charlestown to Chelmsford and Middlesex Village in Lowell.

This fine legislation, in the form of House Bill no. 6049, was signed into law on July 12 by our Governor Michael Dukakis. I am pleased to submit to you a copy of the bill. It is my hope that you will publicize this fine work and especially the enormous efforts of Mr. Leonard Harmon, whose unflinching enthusiasm and imagination are the basis for both these successes.

It should be hailed both near and far that as of this present writing, rides on the Old Middlesex Canal and on the packet boat, "Colonel Baldwin" are to be had on weekends starting at 2 p.m., the last ride starting at 4 p.m.

Frances B. VerPlanck,
Middlesex Canal
Association

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The new elderly housing proposed in Winchester is fine if we had loads of money. How many elderly folks can pay rents needed for this lush housing?

I know there are some rich elderly, but most are poor. Most can't even get into a real nice nursing home on account of prices.

No one was prepared for the way prices have gone up. The poor would have to pitch a tent on the common if we didn't have low cost elderly housing. How then can the old pay these staggering rents coming up? I hope our thoughtful politicians come up with some kind of health insurance. If they could hear the complaints I hear every day from people who have a dollar, they would know why we need this kind of care.

Nobody seems to care about our real sick elderly — that is our bigwigs do not and could care less as they get large pensions for sitting around and having what they call fun. Too bad.

Town watch...

A petition in the works

By The Observer

Mr. and Mrs. Frans Burkhout of Lorena road may be the catalysts in getting a restaurant with a liquor license in Winchester.

Mr. Burkhout, who comes from an extensive background in hotel management and service, as well as cooking, and his wife, "who is a very good cook," have expressed an interest in opening a restaurant here along the lines of Modern Gourmet in Newton. Modern Gourmet, a small, intimate establishment, was recently named the best restaurant in the Boston area.

The hitch is, Burkhout wants to see wine served with meals and a small waiting area which would provide drinks before or after meals.

Selectmen listened to his credentials and some of the ideas he has and explained that the process by which Winchester can have a liquor licensed-restaurant is a lengthy one, the earliest date being March 1978.

Selectmen displayed an obvious interest in seeing a petition started to ask the state legislature to allow the question on the town election ballot.

They also made it very clear to the Burkhouits, however, that should a license be granted, any restaurateur could apply. The board did not discuss whether there could be more than one.

Burkhout will look further into the legal process involved. Townspeople should start thinking about signing a petition.

In what have been the shortest public hearings ever before the board of selectmen, taxi owner James T. Sullivan voluntarily relinquished his four hackney licenses, stunning the audience and the selectmen.

It took two minutes for Chairman Barbara S. Hankins to call the hearing, hear Sullivan's attorney Daniel O'Connell give back the licenses, and close the hearing. He returned them to avoid having to go through the publicity of the hearing, he said.

A statement from another of Sullivan's attorneys, Regina M. Quinlan, said that Sullivan would continue looking for a buyer for Winchester Cab Company and that he would meanwhile operate as Private Livery Company of Winchester. Private livery does not come under the jurisdiction of the board of selectmen and insurance coverage is different for private and public livery. It was Sullivan's insurance problems which led to the difficulties.

So a story that went on and on for many weeks has come to an end. It remains to be seen what will come of Winchester Cab Company.

The Winchester Youth Job Clearing House has gotten off to a good start, says Ken Duffy, coordinator of the new project which seeks to match employers with prospective young employees.

Application forms for jobs are now available at the fire station. Duffy, a fire fighter, says, Various opportunities are open to the town's youth — child care, yard work, cooking, companionship, errands, cleaning out cellars and garages — and anyone needing the services of a young person in junior high or high school may call the senior service line 729-2111.

The clearing house will match the person needing help with one of the applicants. Terms and hours are arranged privately.

Visitors from Japan

By Elizabeth Mahoney
Correspondent

Traditional American summer foods like hotdogs, potato salad, cole slaw, blueberries, maple syrup and popsicles have taken on a new meaning for our family.

We are hosting two young Japanese students during a 10-day visit in the Arlington-Winchester area. The young people are part of a delegation of 16 sponsored by the World Youth Visit Exchange Association.

The host family part of the tour, which takes them to San Francisco, New York City, Niagara Falls and Washington, enables the young visitors to see American family life close up.

At our house they have learned about charming American customs like "Eat-and-Run," the bathroom line-up, convenience foods from the local deli counter, noisy appliances, malfunctioning hot water tank, and overheated car radiator.

American disco, Red Sox baseball, Museum of Fine Arts, shopping malls, the Boston Pops and Copley Square have been on our sight-seeing agenda. Also ocean swimming, lake dipping and just sitting in the heat on a patio.

While loitering on the grass of the Esplanade waiting for the outdoor Pops concert to begin at the Hatch Shell, my husband commented "Why have we waited for international visitors to get us out to enjoy our area?"

One of our guests, Mayumi Ogura, is a piano and organ teacher. She was delighted to have my husband teach her to play the American mountain dulcimer and show her the more difficult banjo. She also saw the organs at Hammond Castle in Gloucester.

My children have been delighted with our lovely visitor's skill with the Japanese paper-folding art of origami. Paper birds, turtles, boxes, hats and other small beasts are rapidly filling every available end table and coffee table.

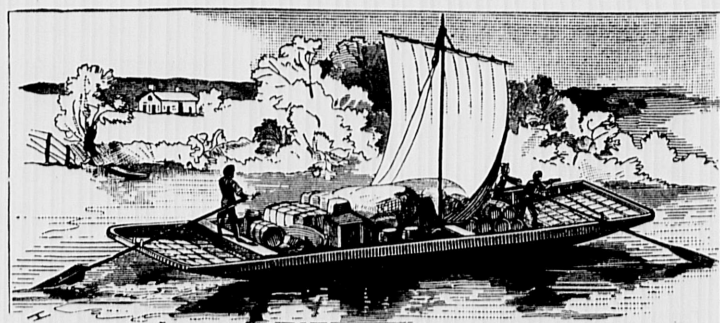

Summer fruits in summer desserts have been much enjoyed. Strawberry shortcake was voted a winner by our Japanese guests.

Strawberry Shortcake

3 cups sifted all-purpose flour
3 teaspoons plus 1/4 teaspoon baking powder
2-3 cup sugar (about)
1 1/4 cup soft shortening
1 egg, well beaten
2-3 cup milk (about)
3 pints strawberries
Heavy cream

Sift flour, baking powder, three tablespoons sugar and the salt into bowl. Cut in shortening. Add egg and enough milk to make a soft dough, mixing with fork. Knead lightly for about 20 turns on a floured board. Divide into thirds. Pat out each third in a greased 9-inch layer cake pan. Bake in preheated oven (450 degrees) about 15 minutes. Wash and hull berries. Cut in half and sweeten to taste. Put shortcake layers together with berries between and on top. Serve with cream or whipped cream. Makes 6 to 8 servings. Hot weather shortcut: skip the baking and purchase sponge cake shells. Enjoy.

Saltmarsh voted to reconsider. Supporters said that the bill would help Boston by bringing in some $10 million and claimed it was the least painful way of helping Boston raise money. This was the same argument used by opponents to reconsideration who said that the bill would benefit only Boston at the expense of other communities.

The House voted 141-75 but failed to gain the necessary two-thirds majority to pass a key rules change supported by the leadership. The rules change would have moved unscheduled debate from the beginning of each day's House session to the end. Rep. Saltmarsh voted against the rules change.

In an effort to stop abuses, the House passed 212-11 a bill restricting the sale of hearing aids only to persons who have recommendations from audiologists or physicians. Rep. Saltmarsh voted for the bill, which is aimed at prohibiting hearing aid dealers from prescribing and then selling aids to people who do not need them, taking advantage especially the poor and elderly.

Most of this week's action in the Senate centered around the 15-hour marathon session which finally approved a $4.3 billion budget, some $160 million higher than the recently passed House version.

The Senate approved 26-6 the budget which begins July 1. Key provisions include a cut from eight to five percent in the meals tax; the "workfare" requirement that employable welfare fathers work at public jobs to retain their benefits; exemption of college students from the meals tax; elimination of House-provision forcing outgoing UMass President Robert Wood out of his expensive downtown office; $3.5 million in additional college scholarships for students from Massachusetts; and $11 million in medical services for general relief recipients.

Senator Sam Rotondi was among the majority voting for the package. The conflicting House and Senate budgets now go to a House-Senate conference committee to hammer out a compromise.

Within budget deliberations, the Senate took the following votes:

Workfare: Rotondi voted with the 32-3 majority requiring employable, able-bodied fathers receiving welfare to work at public jobs in order to keep their benefits.

Blue laws: Rotondi voted to allow local communities to repeal the blue laws in their towns. The move was defeated, however, 18-14.

Lottery job cap: Rotondi voted, as did the entire Senate, to approve an amendment which places a ceiling on the number of state lottery employees by prohibiting the number of employees during fiscal year 1978 from exceeding the number employed by the lottery commission on June 30, 1977, the last day of fiscal year 1977.

Full-time employees: The Senate defeated 24-9 an amendment to require all legislative employees to work full-time and not engage in outside business activities during business hours. Rotondi voted against the full-time requirement.

Senate aids: The Senate rejected 32-0 an amendment decreasing by $675,000 funds for Senate personnel. The reduction would have brought the amount available for Senate aids down from $1.675 million to $1 million.

Courts: The Senate defeated 21-10 an amendment to add $150,000 to the budget to implement the Cox Committee recommendations on judicial court reform. Rotondi voted for the $150,000.

Milk commission: The Senate defeated 27-9 an amendment to restore $247,000 in funding for the state division of milk control. Sen. Rotondi voted against the funding.

In other action this week, the Senate refused to kill a bill which sets up a special committee to study pornography and its effect on people, especially children. Supporters argued the increase in pornography could have bad effects and claimed the study would be useful. Opponents argued another study is ineffective, a waste of time, and noted the obscene literature commission has been defunct and inactive for years. Sen. Rotondi voted to set up the commission.

To date the cumulative attendance record shows that Representative Sherman W. Saltmarsh, Jr., has been present for 99 percent of the 317 roll call votes in the House. Senator Sam Rotondi has been present for 100 percent of the Senate's 185 roll calls.

House personnel practices

In the waning days of the first half of the 1977 session before the July recess, the House was embroiled in several controversies over House rules and personnel. The actions reviewed below amounted to challenges to the leadership and attempts by several coalitions of legislators to adopt several orders relating to what they called "long overdue reform" of several House rules regarding hiring, firing, personnel practices and chaplain rotation.

Rep. Sherman W. Saltmarsh Jr. voted with the minority for an order, defeated 142-81, requiring review of all legislative positions by Nov. 1 and terminating them unless affirmatively continued by vote of the House. This is the so-called "Sunset Law." Supporters argued that the law would help weed out unnecessary positions, save the taxpayer money, and stop the wasted patronage in the legislature. Opponents argued the change is too radical without safeguards, noted the Speaker has made attempts to weed out "no-shows," and questioned where the alleged abuses exist.

The House barely defeated, 110-109, an order that legislation be drafted by the Rules Committee to halt abuses by legislative employees who do not work an eight-hour day and 40-hour week. Rep. Saltmarsh voted for the order.

Supporters argued that the legislation would stop any legislative employees who do not work full time, claimed there are still several "No-show" employees, and claimed the taxpayer is being cheated. Opponents said the issue is being blown out of proportion, claimed the Speaker has already and will continue to initiate reforms, one contended it is the Speaker's duty and he is available for input, suggestions, and the pointing out of abuses.

Rep. Saltmarsh again voted in favor of an order that the House Rules Committee review hiring of House employees and that the panel be required to take recorded votes on approval or rejection of hiring. The order was defeated 117-99.

Those in favor of the order suggested that 16 members of the Rules Committee have unethically and perhaps illegally signed over their proxy vote to Speaker McGee on hiring matters and claimed this has given hiring power to one person. Some further charged the letter signed by members transferring their power and vote to the Speaker was signed and backdated in the past few weeks to cover up discrepancies; others noted the Rules Committee didn't exist until Jan. 12, yet on Jan. 5 the comptroller was written a letter stating the committee had voted to rehire 188 persons.

Opponents argued that the proxy voting is not unethical, said they have faith in the Speaker's judgement, and noted the Speaker has always made available the names and salaries of employees to the committee.

In an overwhelming vote, however, by a 219-1 margin, an amendment to have the Rules Committee consider the action of several of its members in signing over their power to vote on hiring and firing to the Speaker. Rep. Saltmarsh supported this amendment.

By 128-90, the House rejected an amendment to have the Rules Committee consider having all decisions on hiring, firing and salaries made by a recorded vote. Rep. Saltmarsh voted for the amendment.

Supporters said the move would bring personnel matters into the open and claimed it would help eliminate patronage, "no-shows," and abuses.

Opponents again argued that proxy voting is not unethical and reaffirmed their faith in the reforms the Speaker has already made and in his judgment and administrative abilities.

Rep. Saltmarsh joined the majority in a nearly unanimous vote, 210-1, to adopt an order directing the House Rules Committee to study and implement steps to completely modernize the legislative personnel system, and to consider many steps, including a central personnel record, a personnel officer, ceilings on the number of legislative employees, and a yearly review by the state auditor.

By 127-89, the House rejected an order directing the House chaplain to prepare a rotating schedule of visiting chaplains to offer the daily prayers before each House session. Rep. Saltmarsh voted against the measure.

Supporters said the order would insure that persons of many different beliefs in the state would be represented. Opponents pointed out that while many different chaplains have been asked to come, there have been scheduling problems trying to get them to the House on particular days; they also claimed there have been dozens of visiting chaplains over the years.

Bloodmobile logs lots of donations; next on Aug. 24

Winchester supporters of the Red Cross Blood Program more than met the challenge given them last week at the Bloodmobile visit to the church of the Epiphany.

Because of the summer blood shortage, Winchester was asked to up its July donations by 20 per cent. Actually the increase proved to be 60 per cent, reports Mary Fowle, executive director of the local Red Cross Chapter. Seventy-five men, women and youths showed and up 64 donations were recorded.

"It was a wonderful response," said Mrs. Fowle. "And we hope that all eligible donors who missed the Epiphany visit will mark Wednesday, August 24, on their calendars now. That is the date of the big August Bloodmobile visit, sponsored jointly by the Knights of Columbus and the Church of the Immaculate Conception."

Arrangements for this August visit are being made by Mrs. Mary Brown, of Immaculate Conception and Simon Donovan of the Knights of Columbus.

Paul Williamson captures Boat Club's Swanson Cup

Paul Williamson of 55 Yale st. repeated his winning performance of last year as he skillfully skippered his N-10 out in front of a fleet of eight other juniors to capture the Winchester Boat Club's 1977 Swanson Cup.

Young Williamson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard P. Williamson, accumulated 10.25 points in taking the annual regatta for under-14 helmsmen using the ten-foot, cat-rigged N-10. The races took place July 5 and 6 on the Upper Mystic Lake.

Other WBC juniors and their order of finish were: second, Ned Towle (17.75 points), third, Peter Mills (18 points), fourth, Ed Mills (18.50 points), fifth, Lisa Levaggi (20 points), sixth, Betsy Keyes (21 points), seventh, John Williamson (33 points), eighth, Jayne Brody (36 points), and ninth, Lori Levaggi (38 points).

In other sailing news, the WBC sent a selected group of three juniors (ages 13-17) to the local eliminations for the Gallagher Cup held at Regatta Point Community Boating in Worcester on July 11 and 12.

Skipped by Charles Hagedorn of Lexington, with Tricia Simboli and Lisa Thyson as crew, the WBC recorded finishes of 2-2-7-5-3-4-5-4-1-5-5 to place fifth overall in a six-boat fleet of O'Day 2 sailboats. Unfortunately, a protest registered against Winchester in the third race marred an otherwise commendable performance by these top junior sailors.

Drama workshop to run 4 weeks

The Winchester Recreation Department will be sponsoring a four-week drama workshop to provide children of all ages a chance to become better acquainted with the art of theatre.

The workshop will conclude with an afternoon of dramatic festivities such as selected scenes and oral interpretation readings. These readings and scenes will be chosen to fit the needs of the group.

On July 25 all interested are asked to meet in front of the high school at 9 a.m. Daily the players will meet at 9 a.m. and part of the group at 2 p.m.

Goals of the workshop are to enrich the participants with a deeper understanding of the theatre with the application of various techniques and the study of other related arts forms such as music and movement. A greater understanding of the drama involved in our living experiences is also hoped for. In order to achieve these goals, techniques from Uta Hagen's book "Respect for Acting" and a variety of other sources will be utilized.

Participants are asked to bring a bag lunch, for lunch time will be a shared event in which the group can become better acquainted.

The recreation department is also providing drama hour workshops for the special education program and in cooperation with the arts and crafts class, celebrated a puppet show July 14.

The drama workshop to children of all ages, and high school aged people are especially welcome. If there are any questions call 729-2951. The final afternoon of dramatic festivities will be August 18.

Baseball

Ginn A baseball team, last year's playoff finalist, is off to a slow start this season with the only bright spots being the hitting averages of Brad Cowen (.500) and Gary Stewart (.430). The team is hoping to pull it all together soon and make a run at the leaders.

A strong B team from Ginn field extended their record to 3-0 before a comeback victory by McDonald last week. John Myres led the way over at Leonard Field Monday. He struck out every batter he faced before being taken out in the third, and was three for three at the plate with a three-run homer to top things off. Ginn won easily, 9-1.

Later in the week, Ginn finished a suspended game with co-leader McDonald with a tight 9-8 win in extra innings. Ricky Velch knocked home the winning run with a two-out triple in an extremely well played game. Kevin Scully and John Myres are leading the Ginn B team with hefty .667 averages. The two players are also the number one battery for the first place Ginn team.

Field trips

On Friday, July 22, Arts & Crafts, West Side and McDonald Fields will be traveling to Canobie Lake Park, while Ginn and Leonard Fields will be visiting the USS Constitution. Anyone wishing to go should have their permission slips in immediately.

Playground news

The MDC Traveling Zoo made a visit to Ginn Field last week and had more than 200 town youngsters file through it's doors.

The trailer-type zoo contained everything from reptiles to monkeys. A special treat for the children came when they were allowed to handle rabbits and guinea pigs. Hikes were organized by other town playgrounds to Ginn to visit the zoo.

Each cage was marked with a description of the animal inside, which made the exhibit informative as well as fun. After the exhibit, McDonald Field teamed up against Ginn in a giant kickball game that topped off the morning.

On Thursday afternoon, a bingo match was held at Ginn. Peter Cote won the overall match with six wins. Suzanne Cote with her helper Laura Jacobs came in second with four wins. Also playing were Mike and Chris Ducharme, Ellen Welsh, and Glyn Jacobs.

Coming up next week will be a visit from the Winchester Fire Department ladder truck. More information on this will be given at the playgrounds next week.

Bowling

The recreation bowling program is entering its fifth week and has been consistently drawing more than 200 children a week from town playgrounds.

The program includes transportation from the playgrounds to the Brunswick Bowl-a-way Lanes in Burlington, where the children have 2 1/2 hours of unlimited bowling either 10 pin or candlepin. Children also receive a hot dog or ice cream and soft drink, all for a low cost.

For information, contact the recreation department or any of the town playground instructors.

Bowlers bus route

For the rest of the summer the following bus routes will be used to take playground children to the bowling alley:

Route 1: Tuesday 11:30 to 2:30. Bus will start the pickup at 11:30 at West Side field playground and all children will be returned by 2:30. This bus serves West Side and Ginn Field.

Route 3: Thursday 11:30 to 2:30. Bus will start the pickup at 11:30 at Leonard field and all children will be returned by 2:30. This bus serves Leonard and McDonald field.

Arts & Crafts

The arts & crafts students worked this week toward a puppet show, held on Thursday. Marionettes were made in the mornings, and hand-puppets in the afternoons. The puppet show used both the musical and artistic interests of all the children. The week was ended with a day of clay.

Next week's activities include plaster casts and sculpture.

Run in seventh wins game for major league all-stars

By James R. Stewart Jr.

Frustrated three times by big Don Day, pitcher for the Colonial, (Acton) All-Stars, Pat Costello, Winchester National League Senior All-Stars slammed a triple over the head of the right fielder, with one out in the bottom of the seventh inning, Monday night at Skillings Field. When he slid under the catcher's tag with the winning run as Alan Christy bounced a high hopper to the Colonial's second baseman, Costello made up for the strike-out, foul out and fly out he had collected in his previous times at bat.

The game started out as a laugher. Bob teDuits opened the festivities against Winchester pitcher Fran Murray of the Smyly Buick Cubs with a double to deep left field. One strike out was followed by a pair of errors by shortstop Mark Ockerbloom, a single and a double that plated three runs, even though the second doubler was nailed trying to stretch the hit into a triple by some accurate throwing from John Henley to Ockerbloom to John Wiseman. Another strikeout ended the inning with the visitors three runs in the van before Winchester came to bat.

Winchester batters, in the first, patiently took pitches from left-hander Day, almost all day, and when the smoke had cleared, Winchester was ahead, 4-3 on seven walks and three whiffs! Colin Green, Henley, Murray and Christy scored the runs.

The game then went into a deep funk, each side coming up with sparkling plays, until the sixth inning when Colonial went ahead on a run scored by Dave Shimkus via an error and two singles. Colonial threatened again in the seventh and had men on second and third with two out, but stellar center fielder Henley - gathered in Shimkus' bid to be a hero, to keep the visitors' margin to one as Winchester came up for their final at bat.

Scotsmen still quote the promise of the men of Robert the Bruce in 1320, in the magnificent Declaration of Arbroath: "For so long as one hundred men of us remain we shall never submit under any conditions to the domination of the English."

Experts say that for most Scots today this old defiance has dwindled. The characteristic sound of modern Scotland is not the crunch of claymores against English skulls; it is the gentle burr of Scotsmen calling English and American capital and factories to the new industrial towns that are currently rising or planned all over the lovely land.

Methodist Church exchanges ministers with English parish

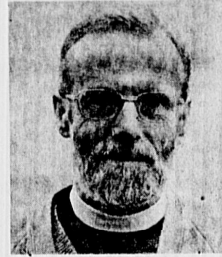

The Reverend John Chilton of Hull, England, will be minister-in-residence at the Crawford Memorial United Methodist Church for seven weeks this summer. During the same time, Rev. Leon S. Hatch Jr. will be serving the parish in Hull.

Rev. Chilton and his wife, Mary, arrived in the US Monday and will reside in the parsonage during the exchange ministry. Both of the Chiltons were in educational work before John entered the ministry in 1953.

At present, the Chiltons serve a circuit on the outskirts of Hull made up of five churches. In addition, Rev. Chilton serves as chaplain in a maximum security prison and is in charge of training programs for those in ministerial studies.

Rev. Chilton will conduct a communion service during the mid-week gathering at Crawford Memorial July 28. He will also preach at the union services Aug. 21 and 28 at 9:30 a.m. at the Methodist Church.

The exchange program under which the Chiltons and the Hatches are scheduled is operated by the World Methodist Council at Lake

Rev. John Chilton

Junalaska, N.C. For about 30 years the council has arranged for ministers from abroad to change places with ministers from this country. In some cases, the exchange is made for an entire year.

The Hatches will visit their oldest daughter, Sharon, who is a student at Oxford for the summer, on their way up to Hull, which is located on the east coast of England about halfway between London and Edinburgh. They hope to do some traveling in Great Britain and on the Continent during their stay.

The Hatches will return to Winchester in time for Dr. Hatch to conduct the final summer union service at Crawford Church Sept. 4.

SELL HOME YOURSELF?

I'm sure you've heard it said: "Why should I sell my home through a REALTOR? I can sell it myself and save a lot of money." Right? Wrong! This kind of thinking usually turns out to be financially unwise. The prospects will usually start by mentally deducting the commission and then start negotiating from there. On the average, a homeowner saves NO money when he sells his own home. In fact, the opposite is true. Studies over a ten year period show that the net proceeds from owner-sold property are LESS than the REALTOR-sold piece of real estate, even after the payment of commission. As a private seller you're at a great disadvantage in the intricate areas of financing, negotiating and protecting yourself from all sorts of do-it-yourself pitfalls. You've got a lot invested in your home. It makes sense to list it with a REALTOR. He'll sell it for you without hitches—for the best price and in the shortest amount of time.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at ANN BLACKHAM & CO., 11 Thompson St., Winchester, Phone 729-1263. We're here to help!

Area firm gets solar heating financial aid

Over $170,000 in federal cost-sharing aid to finance solar heat and hot water for a two-story office building on the Middlesex Turnpike in Burlington was announced by U.S. Rep. Edward J. Markey.

Markey said the contract will go to Technology Properties Trust, the real estate firm which is constructing the office building for multi-tenant use. Occupancy is expected by mid-summer.

According to Markey, the award—which is one of 80 in 33 states—is a new phase in the campaign by the U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) to encourage the use of solar energy in commercial buildings.

The new projects, which range from firehouses to shops and restaurants across the country and include two in Boston and one in Amherst, are the second cycle of a five-year series of demonstration projects begun in 1975. Selection of the first 32 projects was made last April. The 80 projects announced this week total $12.6 million and were selected from 307 proposals submitted in response to a solicitation issued by ERDA last fall.

The average investment in each project of federal funds, according to Markey, is about $156,000, about two-thirds of the average cost of each project.

Markey noted that Technology Properties Trust had arranged the ERDA contracts through the Burlington-based firm on Aerospace Systems, Inc., which serves as prime contractor for the solar equipment.

Aerospace Systems, now based in Building 12 of the New England Executive Park, will install 90 solar panels on the two-story structure, and will hopefully be ready for operation by next winter.

A spokesman for the firm estimated that the solar equipment will supply 80 percent of the heat for the building, as well as provide hot water.

Markey explained that cooperative agreements for all 80 projects are expected to be signed within about three months, and that a third round of applications will begin this summer for the next cycle of ERDA demonstration projects.

Under provisions of the Solar Heating and Cooling Demonstration Act of 1974, said Markey, ERDA has general jurisdiction over residential as well as commercial solar heating and cooling demonstrations.

health in action

Members of the junior class at Lawrence Memorial School of Nursing are finding out exactly what a community health nurse does in a home setting from the staff at Tri Community Health Services, Inc.

All 37 juniors are taking turns observing at Tri Community where "they will be exposed to a broad overview of the coverage and capabilities of a home health agency and how community nurses function," according to Jayne Tapia, Professional Director.

"It is important for the student nurses to see the relationship between how a good plan for the patient is set up in the hospital and continued by the community health nurse while the patient needs care at home," she states.

Pauline Shanks, MSN, nursing supervisor, conducts the students' orientation to the agency. Class members are instructed by Lore Jean Kern, BSN, Community Care Coordinator at Symmes Hospital, and Barbara Dalis, MSN, Nurse for the Elderly at Arlington Council on Aging.

While gaining a working knowledge of a home health agency and its nursing and supportive services, the students participate in the in-service education programs held weekly at Tri Community's headquarters.

Selectmen study housing project

Arthur D. Ullian of Boston Investment and Development Company took his preliminary plans for a seven-story subsidized apartment building for the elderly (Winchester House) to the board of selectmen Monday, hoping his presentation would encourage them to make favorable recommendations to the Department of Housing and Urban Development. The board, while favoring the need for such housing, balked at making a commitment until more refined plans were made available to them.

Also in attendance were about a dozen and a half abutters and other parties interested in the building which would front on Waterfield road and back up into the parking lot now known as Renton's lot. Almost to a one the audience objected to the project, although former selectman Lawrence T. Smith was the only one to speak. A couple of members of the Winchester Ecumenical Association were also present Monday night. That group has been outspoken in its support of apartment buildings for the elderly and poor.

Under the current proposal, which is the third Ullian has come up with for this site, a single building with 110 one-bedroom apartments would go up primarily in the parking lot area. There would also be an apartment for a resident superintendent. Ullian intends to purchase the property owned by Nicholas Fitzgerald for an estimated $180,000. There is a question of what would happen 20 years after the construction of the building, when HUD assistance ends. Selectmen realized the possibility of expansion toward Rangeley road through the wooded area, most of which under this current proposal, will be untouched.

Ullian showed his plans for the structure and assured the board that when he goes again to the planning board August 15, he will have more refined drawings and a model of the building.

The building itself would go back into the parking lot, with windows and balconies overlooking the train station on one side and the back of the row of stores on Church street on the other. The railroad side of apartments would be soundproofed, according to HUD regulations. There would be no apartments on the first and second floors on the train side. The building there would be on stilts to allow passage through to the building's parking area behind and under.

The third floor would be on eye level to the waiting room at the station. Ullian envisions a direct passage between the building and the train depot at this level. Then the rest of the building would go another four stories. On the parking lot side, the apartments would begin on the first floor.

Entry to the structure would be through a U-shaped drive. Ullian suggested tenants themselves could staff the front desk and take on some security responsibilities, as they have in other elderly housing he has developed.

Welfare of the elderly tenants would be watched over by personnel trained in detecting changes in older persons which could signal illness or danger to them. Each apartment would have, in addition, a call button to summon immediate assistance. Ten percent of the kitchens and bathrooms would be equipped with facilities for handicapped tenants.

Selectmen questioned the rental fee of $396. Ullian said that HUD sets "market rents" depending on the location of the housing. "The market rent," Ullian said, "has to be enough to make the project work." The return on Ullian's investment can be no greater than six percent, he added.

Under the rent subsidy section 8, a tenant with an income of less than $5000 would pay no more than 15 percent of the rent. A tenant with an income greater than $5000 would pay no more than 25 percent. The cutoff income for eligibility is $10,000 for a single person, and about $12,000 for a couple.

Based on Ullian's figure from the Department of Community Affairs, Winchester needs housing for about 512 elderly citizens. Harry Chelaflo asked how, in a 110-unit building, the tenants would be chosen. Ullian replied that it would have to be first come-first served. He added that selectmen have been asked by HUD, under the section 8 application, only to comment on the need for such housing and the guarantee that public services like police and fire would be sufficient to cover the needs of the tenants.

Town Manager Thomas J. Groux responded that "it was his understanding that HUD wants comments and information which selectmen deem relevant to HUD's determination of need." The board has until today to respond to the invitation to comment. O'Connell suggested that should the board choose to answer HUD, it attach a statement that a more complete set of plans on which to base a decision would not be available until August 15.

Groux is going to respond to HUD, expressing a favorable attitude toward housing for the elderly but questioning the lack of specifics, the need for variances in zoning by-laws, and the concern of neighbors in the controversial Rangeley Ravine areas.

Assuming HUD approval, the next step is for Ullian to ask the board of appeal for approval under Chapter 774, the so-called snob zoning act which overrides local zoning

There's definitely something amiss at the department of public works. Whether the problems are severe enough to disrupt the workings of the entire department, as some people have said, or whether they are the murmurings of a disgruntled few, as others maintain, is yet to be determined.

In a public hearing at the selectmen's Monday night meeting, former charter commissioners Vincent Carroll, Clara Hewis, and Michael Saraco spoke eloquently and sympathetically of the unrest and fear in the ranks of public works employees. DPW Director Walter J. Tonaszuck and Town Manager Thomas J. Groux spoke with equal determination in defense of the DPW reorganization and handling of personnel matters.

The meeting was formal and deliberate as each of the principals spoke one after the other, first Carroll, then Hewis, then Saraco, with rebuttals following by Tonaszuck and Groux. Selectmen Chairman Barbara Hankins spoke briefly, expressing disbelief that any town employee would be fearful of approaching the selectmen.

Vincent Carroll set the tone of the meeting, called at the request of the former commissioners, saying, "Since the adoption of the charter, and the advent of the town manager and the director of public works, problems within the DPW have been blamed on the charter. Misinterpretation of the charter is hurting employees and the former commissioners."

Carroll was referring to specific charges of pay cuts and downgrading which were in violation of the intent of the charter. He spoke of one foreman who was made a working foreman taking a pay cut and what he thought of as a demotion.

Carroll said, "At a meeting at my home two weeks ago with DPW employees, some sorry stories came out. Fear has been instilled in some of these workers and they did not come tonight because they feared reprisals from the director."

When Tonaszuck spoke later in the meeting, he returned the charges of possible reprisals and said, "It seems that 'fear' has become something of a handwaggon for some people to jump on. No one has been disciplined or demoted while I have been director." He said the only suspensions were for two half-days for abuse of sick time. Tonaszuck conceded that the department has a "severe problem" with abuse of sick leave and that the way to handle it is through enforcing rules.

Carroll cited an example of worker unrest in the case of a man who had plowed snow for 64 hours one week. When he punched out at the end of his work week, Carroll said, the director told him to stay on and work overtime. The employee said he couldn't work any more without a few hours of sleep and that if he could get some rest first, he could return to work. The next day, Carroll said, the director docked him one personal day as a penalty.

When Tonaszuck spoke on this matter he denied that any disciplinary action has been taken for anything other than abuse of sick leave.

Clara Hewis, chairman of the defunct charter commission, picked up the discussion at this point. "We are not getting the kind of work we had been getting because the men feel now that their work is just another job," she said. "They have been demoralized."

She reminded the board of selectmen that they have the power to investigate charges within the DPW. "You have a deep responsibility," she said, "to fit the pieces together and to determine if problems exist through your executive, administrative, and investigative powers."

Michael Saraco, director of public health, continued, "It disturbs me to get the charter thrown in my face every time I turn around. Morale is going down fast."

He urged better communication with the "old-timers" in the DPW. "In many ways these problems are not the fault of Wally Tonaszuck and Tom Groux. Both newcomers should talk with some of the old-timers who have been around here many years."

Saraco, speaking deliberately and slowly, like the previous speakers, said, "There are three kinds of complaints — first is the oral and I can handle that; second is the written, but there are just so many times you can write a letter; third — and this one is the worst — is the silent complaint."

He warned selectmen that silent complaints will mean statements of protest like hitting the curbstone with a sander or taking four days instead of four hours to do a job. He also suggested that there could be more breakdowns in equipment.

Saraco further warned the board that these problems are costing the town money. "As soon as a worker hits 55 or puts in 20 years of service, he can retire. Two years ago our contributory retirement fund was $400,000. It's going to hit a million." His implication was that disgruntled workers approaching retirement are more likely to seek that retirement quickly.

Saraco closed his presentation with a plea for unity. "We are all on the same team — let's work together. Don't make changes just for the sake of changes. Build up job pride. We don't have job pride any more," he said.

Tonaszuck countered the potential threat of job slowdowns. He said that last year it took four or five men through the spring, summer, and fall to paint the crosswalks.

This year, he said, the job was finished in April with a crew of three men.

He said, "I think these concerns are out of proportion. There's a small number, maybe ten percent, of the workers who have gripes."

Selectmen Richard Wilsack asked why complaints haven't been taken through the regular grievance procedure whereby a grievance is taken first to the director, then the town manager and finally the board of selectmen. Barbara Hankins also questioned the lack of appeals reaching the selectmen.

Hankins said, "No appeals have been brought to the board of selectmen in over two years. I am surprised we haven't heard from the employees if unrest is as widespread as you indicate."

Tom Groux also said that there is a regular grievance procedure and that any problems could have been brought up during contract negotiations with the town employees association.

Hankins said, "The most appropriate route for the employees is through their strong union. At no time that I know of did the union bring up these questions."

A DPW employee who spoke with The Star Tuesday and who asked that his name not be used, said that the men are afraid of speaking out for fear of reprisals. "These jobs put bread and butter on our tables," he said, "and the guys just aren't ready to take a chance on getting penalties put on them."

He also said that nine members of the union voted against the contract and some of the others were afraid of being intimidated by speaking out.

Selectman Edward O'Connell said, "It is unfortunate and unfounded that employees cannot come before their department head or the board of selectmen."

School board ok's new teacher evaluation forms

The school committee Monday night accepted a revised teacher evaluation form that would rank Winchester teachers in five categories, ranging from "superior" to "not acceptable."

The revised form was drawn up by the Evaluation Study Committee, headed up by Assistant Superintendent for Curriculum Walter Gleason, after complaints had been received from teachers, administrators and school board members that the old form made it difficult to interpret teacher performance.

While the board accepted the form, they asked Gleason to receive more input from the board members, meet again with his evaluation committee, and return to the school board in September with a finished product.

The evaluation procedure utilized this past year, called the "Field Method," was developed last year by Gleason. Described as a "clinical-anecdotal" form, the Field Method evaluation attempted to evaluate teachers in descriptive terms. Supervisors (principals and department heads) would choose from a series of set descriptions those which most closely approximated a teacher's performance.

The new forms rate teachers as superior, above average for Winchester, average for Winchester, below average for Winchester, and not acceptable. The five categories are Barbara Hankins said, "I am deeply concerned that there are no town employees here."

Groux stood up for the DPW reorganization, admonishing the charter commissioners not to take complaints against the charter personally. "You put together a document which was considered and voted on by the people of this town. They, not you the commissioners, are responsible for the charter."

Referring to Saraco's request that the service and skills of long-time DPW employees be considered in making transfers, Groux commented, "I will appoint whoever will do the best job for the department. How a man got his job five or 20 years ago is of little merit when you look at how he is doing the job now. No one cares how I came to Winchester two years ago from New Jersey. They want to know how I perform in this office every day."

In reference to the TEA union, to which the public works employees belong, Groux said, "I will tell you that the TEA reached an impasse with the facfinder until Wally Tonaszuck and I met with the employees directly and worked out the problems. I myself added to the contract the clause which provides that disciplinary action can come before the town manager for review. That was one assurance I could give the employees of job security."

The employee who spoke with The Star said that Groux "sits on grievances" and does nothing about them. "Don't let him kid you," he said, "he sits on them." He also accused Tonaszuck of lying about discipline and demotions. "When you take a fellow who's a W-14 and move him into a W-13 slot, that's a demotion whether he wants to call it one or not."

applied to nine years of performance, including student motivation, preparation and achievement, instructional management, and professional observation. Each of the nine areas is to be accompanied by qualitative descriptions for each of the five levels of performance.

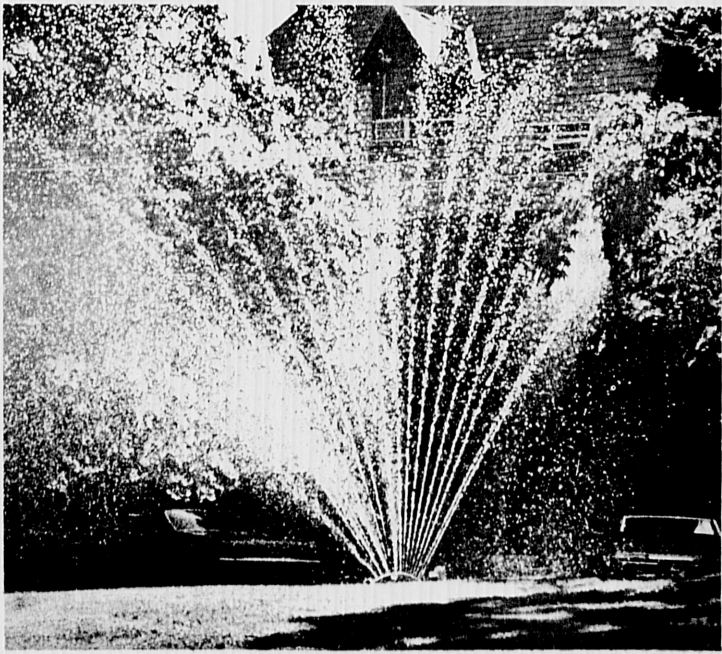

The school board's reaction to the new form was not unanimous. Board member Catherine Alexander felt the qualitative descriptions were "weak" and said, "I'd like to see all the descriptions of quality upgraded."

Gleason noted that "average" for Winchester was generally above average for most communities. Still, Ms. Alexander insisted more could be expected of Winchester teachers.

Committeeman Heinrich Holland, an early opponent of the old evaluation system, reacted favorably. "I think this is fine. It is an enormous improvement over what I had to struggle with in March and April (i.e. the old forms). If it works well, I'd consider it a milestone."

Board Chairman Robert Frank noted he was pleased with the revision, but added that some minimum standards for supervision should be established. He also said supervisors should be encouraged to write down

Chief I. Francis Amico

Served 40 years

Chief Amico dead at 67

Chief I. Francis (Frank) Amico, who adopted Winchester as his lifelong home and rose to become chief of its fire department, died Tuesday night, nearly two years after his retirement.

Funeral services for the chief will be held Saturday at 10 at St. Mary's Church. Burial in Wildwood Cemetery will follow. Visiting hours at Lane Funeral Home are Thursday 7-9 p.m. and Friday 2-4 and 7-9.

Ignazio Francis Amico was born in Italy on August 29, 1910, the son of Francesco and Angelo Amico. Six years later he moved to Winchester — the date was Columbus Day 1916.

As a young boy, he attended the Winchester schools and proved himself to be an outstanding athlete for Winchester

High School. His favorite sport was football and in 1928 he was captain of his football team. That year he was also named the unanimous choice as Mystic Valley Player.

Not content with those honors, the young Amico the following year was the first recipient of the Mansfield Sportsman Cup.

Between high school and joining the fire department, Chief Amico worked at Stone and Webster Ideal Products Company. In June 1938 he married Jennie Marabell. They had two daughters, Rita Rotondo and Linda Graham. The Chief also leaves his grandchildren, Guy and Laura Rotondo and Michael Graham.

In November of 1935 Chief Amico joined the fire department, becoming a lieutenant April 1, 1943, a captain August 26, 1947, and finally chief on May 20, 1963. He retired August 31, 1975.

The fires he covered ranged from his first in 1935 when he responded to a smoky refrigerator fire at the Economy Grocery Store at Washington and Swanton streets, to his last, an attic fire August 8, 1975 on Canal street.

He was a member of the Massachusetts Fire Chiefs Association, International Association of Fire Chiefs, New England Fire Chiefs Association and the Fire Fighting Academy.

He was also a member of the Winchester Rotary Club and the Aberjona Civic Association. Chief Amico served the town also as a town meeting member.

In addition to his wife, daughters, and grandchildren, he leaves four brothers, Paolo of Wakefield, Joseph of Woburn, and Antonio and Arcangelo, both of Winchester.

★ Evaluations

favorable or unfavorable comments and observations, including parental input, as they occur, in order to get an accurate record.

While Mrs. Alexander argued written explanations should accompany every ranking on the evaluation form, the consensus of the school committee was that such written comments would only be required when a teacher's performance is described as "not acceptable."

Another suggestion forwarded by Mrs. Alexander was that supervisors get together with teachers at the start of the year and establish specific, personal goals for each teacher's performance.

Gleason countered that classroom observations, which include individual sessions with the teachers, accomplishes the same thing. Even though only three such observations are required for non-tenured teachers and only one for tenured teachers, Gleason pointed out that the observer may be in the classroom on an informal basis 15 or 20 times a year.

Though he agreed evaluation by such observation sessions can be an effective approach, Gleason said, "One of the problems which emerged in discussions with administrators is the factor of time."

Board member Constance Papas felt that comments should accompany the ratings whenever the evaluation was at either extreme — both "Not acceptable" and "superior." Frank commented that requiring written explanation for every rating would force evaluators to make often "meaningless" comments.

Committee member John Noble suggested the committee go along with the new form for a year and see how it works out. "We've been hashing this thing out since before any of us was on the school committee," he said, noting that there have been several unsuccessful attempts at establishing evaluation procedures.

The board agreed that the prime purpose of evaluations was not to determine staff cutbacks. However, Chairman Frank noted that evaluations are a major source of information on performance, and that reduction in force would indeed be based on performance.

Mrs. Papas listed three goals of teacher evaluation: "To improve instruction for the kids; improve the instruction given by the teachers; and serve as a measure of the system's quality."

Referring to the contention that "average" for Winchester is "above average" compared to other communities, Frank cautioned that, "We should make sure that the average for Winchester means the average for Winchester," and not something less. He expressed worries that principals might have a tendency to rate their staff above average. "Everyone has to get their feet put in the fire. They (the supervisors) have to have the courage to call a teacher's performance average for Winchester... and that's not a 'C'."

Another recommendation from Frank, which was readily accepted by Gleason, was to establish an in-service course for supervisors to train them to use the new forms, and encourage them to make written comments whenever appropriate.

Gleason's Evaluation Study Committee has four other members: High School Principal Vincent Larocco, Vinson-Owen Principal Clare Corcoran, and teachers Donald Stangel and Mary Alice Norris. In preparing the revisions, the committee sought and received input from the school board, principals, department heads, and some teachers.

Some dissatisfaction was expressed by the teachers union, the Winchester Education Association (WEA), over the fact that they were not invited to participate directly in the process. The establishment of evaluation procedures is, by contract, under the purview of the school committee.

Gleason suggested that the end of the 1977-78 school year, another committee be formed to access the results of the new evaluation procedure. The committee would include one school committee member, two administrators chosen by the superintendent, four teachers chosen by the WEA, and the assistant superintendent for curriculum and instruction.

Closing the public hearing, Larry Smith spoke praising the cooperation Ullian has shown the abutters, but asking the board to include in its response to HUD the need for the town to be heard concerning the project. He cited the Parkview Apartment which went up on the site of the burned down Beggs and Cobb tannery. As a result of that development, new height restraints were passed and zoning changes to restrict apartments in Winchester.

"We are concerned about a seven-story building, about the traffic, and about the parking."

Selectmen Chairman Barbara Hankins asked Ullian why he had chosen a site which over the last few years has met with controversy whenever a developer has wanted to build there. Ullian said that he had checked all other available sites in town, but this one was the best. The Bonnell site is not available and the theater site is under consideration for another use, he said.

Several years ago, attempts at developing were blocked by the residents of the Rangeley-Ravine area. An injunction was brought halting bulldozing of that land.

Arthur D. Ullian is the developer of the Parkview Electronics Park of Cross street and of the Elliott Hotel in Boston, 50 percent of whose tenants he says are elderly. He is also a consultant for non-profit housing organizations. His other enterprises, as he explained them to selectmen Monday, include a 100-unit housing development in the central part of the state connected with an existing nursing home; a project which would construct facilities for handicapped persons, particularly the blind; and endeavors on behalf of the Chinese population in Boston.

SUNDAY'S TOP TV RECOMMENDATION

THE CRY OF A HURTING WORLD...
"I'M HUNGRY!"

BOSTON — A gripping television special on the subject of world hunger, "I'm Hungry!" which premieres here Sunday, August 6, at 1:00 p.m. on WNCN-TV, Channel 7, could be "the most important TV special of 1977," according to TV personality Art Linkletter.

Art Linkletter calls hunger program "Most important TV special of 1977."

The program — THE CRY OF A HURTING WORLD... "I'M HUNGRY!" — is being sponsored by World Vision International, a worldwide Christian humanitarian organization.

Linkletter, who appears as a guest on the program, said: "This national TV special on world hunger will help viewers of all ages understand the meaning of hunger and malnutrition. I hope everyone will watch it."

In addition to Linkletter, other featured guests on the program include Julie Andrews, Steve Allen and Jayne Meadows, Vincent Price, Roger Staubach, Shirley Jones, Hank Aaron and Carol Lawrence.

Also appearing will be Billy Graham, Dean Jones, B. J.

Thomas, Dale Evans, The Muppets, which premieres here Sunday, August 6, at 1:00 p.m. on WNCN-TV, Channel 7, could be "the most important TV special of 1977," according to TV personality Art Linkletter.

Other outstanding guests are Art Simon of "Bread for the World," Dr. Roger Revelle from Harvard University, Brad Morse of the UN Development Program, Senator Mark Hatfield, chairman of the Senate Nutrition Committee, and nationally-recognized authorities on hunger and population.

The exhaustive program explores the hunger issue vividly and in explicit detail, taking the viewer into the homes of the Mia family in Bangladesh, the De Silva family in Brazil, and the Alarín family in the Philippines. There are close-ups of the lives of hungry people in India, Kenya, Indonesia, and many other lands where parents and children together attempt to survive on the amount of food an average American eats during a coffee break.

The telecast gives a clear and positive presentation of solutions and remedies for the hunger crisis, with documented stories of heroic and sacrificial work now being done by religious, charitable and government programs overseas.

A chief leaves a legacy

I. Francis Amico would have been 67 next month, certainly not very old. Young enough, in fact, to continue enjoying the retired life of a grandfather.

But Chief Amico died Tuesday night after a long fight. He had battled natural forces as a firefighter for 40 years, but this time, fighting alone against the callous forces of life — and death — he couldn't make it.

In 1975 in a hall lined with red and white helmets, retiring Chief Amico received tributes from town boards, from firefighters, from the governor, from Ambassador Volpe, from organizations. He was overwhelmed by the outpouring of good wishes. He told one reporter at that time, "I just can't believe it. It's really like a dream."

It was under Chief Amico that the west side of town had its own fire station. Since the 1940's the town had been bellowing about the danger of having their homes and lives depend on whether the trucks could get across the railroad tracks before the train came through.

After the grade crossing was removed, there was still opposition to spending the money to build what many east and west sides thought of as an unnecessary station.

The Chief's dream of better service for all townspeople came to fruition when a special town meeting authorized the building of a second station in 1973.

It will be two years on Monday since the Chief's last fire. The effects of his long career, the dedication he gave to the town he adopted as his own, and the perseverance and love he brought to his chosen profession will be a part of Winchester's heritage for years to come.

There were 500 people at that retirement testimonial at the Hillview Country Club in 1975.

But in that great gathering there were also some very special people who now gather in sorrow. To Mrs. Jennie Amico, to their daughters, Rita Rotondo and Linda Graham, and to their grandchildren in whom the Chief took such pride, Guy, Laura, and Michael, The Star extends sympathy and thanks. Thanks for lending this town a part of I. Francis Amico.

Passes through the woods

Selectmen recently voted — not without some deliberate discussion — to retain the tradition of this town in keeping the woodlands and waterlands in Winchester closed to the public.

The reservoirs are closed except for a single fall weekend when the town allows pedestrians and motorists to view the changing leaves. It is indeed a spectacular sight and the Winchester Trails people put together a marvelous description of the birches and mosses, the white pines and spruces.

The shame is that, unlike other lovely areas of town which are accessible year-round for enjoyment of natural beauty and recreation, the Middlesex Fells is essentially forbidden to townspeople.

Selectmen may have to reconsider their vote. They have an out which should be acceptable to the town's board of health, water department, police, fire, and other bodies concerned with the public safety and welfare.

Malcolm H. Masters, a long-time aficionado of hiking and outdoor pleasures, suggests a revocable pass to allow certain persons passage into the woodlands around the water.

In a letter to selectmen he said, "To me it is a crime to deny access to these lands to qualified groups under properly trained leaders." We agree.

A pass could be issued after application to selectmen and would be for specific persons or groups for specific reasons. It is something worth looking into and selectmen are doing just that. Director of Public Works Walter J. Tonaszuck will be receiving an inquiry from the board about the feasibility of limited opening of the woodlands and waterlands.

We support the board's openmindedness in reconsidering their previous vote and we urge them to weigh carefully the dangers of trespassing against the benefits which we can find no where but in the woodlands.

Work crews are cleaning up the area around the newly built housing for the elderly on Westley street (the site of the Old Lincoln School). The buildings are up and work continues on the interiors of the 59 units. Landscaping for the site is expected to begin soon.

School funding debated

By The Observer

The school board decided Monday night they didn't particularly like a drive currently underway to shift the burden of financing public education from the local property tax to state income tax.

The drive is being pursued on two fronts: in a lawsuit which is attempting to declare the funding of public education through property taxes unconstitutional; and in the legislature, where proponents are putting together a bill or two for the next session.

The discussion arose Monday night because the Mass. Association of School Committees is proposing to join in the fight, and Winchester's board wondered what sort of message they should send to the upcoming MASC convention in Hyannis.

The legislation would in effect separate funding from local control over education. Chairman Robert Frank said he was "skeptical" as to whether or not this could effectively be accomplished.

The state now provides an average of 35 per cent of public school funding throughout the state. Winchester's share is somewhat less. Under the new system, the state would take on about half the total cost of public education; the prime source of the funding would be income taxes.

If the state policy were to equalize funding on a per capita basis, clearly Winchester would end up paying out more than it would get back (in some respects this is already true). However, if the state were to distribute funds for public education according to some formula of need, Winchester's contribution would be even more disproportionate to the returns.

Though few are particularly pleased with the present scheme of things, what with rising property taxes and all, the proposed shift in funding control raises serious questions about local autonomy — not just for the school board, but for the whole town. "The alternatives look worse than the local property tax," summed up Frank.

The board agreed to suggest to MASC that they stay out of the controversy, since the issue is liable to pit school committees from poorer towns against those from richer towns.

Share-a-cab comes to Winchester!
As part of Massport's project to provide more choices for travelers leaving Logan Airport and cut down on the number of private cars entering and leaving the airport, thereby reducing air pollution and traffic congestion, Winchester travelers will be able to share a cab with one, two, or three others for a fee of $6 each.

The way it works is this — Upon arrival at Logan any time between 7:30 a.m. and 11:30 p.m. daily, the arriving passenger requests service at the Share-A-Cab booth located in the baggage claim area of the terminals. Within 10 or 15 minutes, and when at least two people going in the same general direction can be matched, a cab will be dispatched to pick them up.

If, however, a match cannot be made within 15 minutes, the passenger will be advised and alternative plans suggested by the dispatcher.

Once in the Share-A-Cab, the passenger is guaranteed the reduced rate, even if the second person does not show up. Each passenger is allowed two pieces of luggage. All surcharges and fees are included in the fare.

All cabs participating in Share-A-Cab are required to adhere strictly to the taxi regulations issued by the City of Boston Police Commissioner and to the rules and regulations of Logan Airport.

Additional information can be had by calling, toll-free from anywhere in Massachusetts, 1-800-732-3466 at any time of day or night.

There are five new faces on the Winchester Finance Committee: Carolyn Ward, 16 Myrtle st.; William L. Morton, 8 Fairmount st.; C. Peter Svahn, 89 Thornberry rd.; Vincent M. O'Reilly, 5 Grove st.; and David C. Pywell, 44 Wildwood st.

The new members were appointed to fill regular three-year terms. Each year, five new members to the 15-member board are chosen by the town moderator, chairman of the board of selectmen, and the finance committee chairman.

The current chairman of the board is Alice K. Mirak, 12 Plato ter.; the vice-chairman is David W. Donahue, 4 Alesworth ave.

Letters from readers

Letters to the editor on any subject of interest to Winchester residents are welcome. They should be typed and not exceed 250 words. All letters must be signed with name and address and a telephone number. Names will be held on request. Deadline for letters is 5 p.m. Monday.

Waterlands

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

As a person keenly interested in the out-of-doors, I wish to add a little to any future discussion of the opening to the public of the Winchester Water lands.

In maintaining over 30 miles of hiking trails in the Middlesex Fells on a volunteer basis for the MDC for many years, I have made a few observations.

Most litter and vandalism occurs in areas bordering on access by motor vehicles. Vandals and litterers are generally too lazy to walk. Note the MDC blocking of all access points by gates or large stones to limit problems.

People who do walk using well defined trails and bridge paths are mostly above average human beings. Most of these people resent vandalism and littering and will help control it. I have led hikes where participants have helped to put out fires before they became dangerous and wasteful. I've had participants lecture to erring youth. The MDC is considering organizing friends into volunteer fire patrols for a few critical weekend days a year.

I feel that opening the woods can help probably more than it can hurt. A limited way of opening the wooded water lands would be on a revocable pass basis. A person could apply for a pass that would give permission to use the woods under a given set of restrictions. Said pass could be revoked if any condition was violated.

As a kid, I roamed the woods in and about Winchester with much pleasure and picked many a quart of berries. Later after moving away, I was thrilled to come back for practice runs around the Winchester reservoirs with the MIT cross country teams. I have been disappointed in returning to Winchester to find these woods CLOSED.

As former Winchester Conservation Commission Chairman, I know there is interest in opening these woods to its citizens. Several times there was on our agenda consideration of the benefits of opening these woods similar to conservation lands and Town Forest. Due to more pressing business we never pursued the matter far enough.

To me it is a crime to deny access to these lands to qualified groups under properly trained leaders. This applies to Winchester groups under the supervision of the Winchester Trails Association and the Appalachian Mountain Club weekend walks under local resident guidance. I am on record with the old sewer and water board on these issues.

Abortion bill

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

To have an abortion is a deeply personal and painful decision, but the Supreme Court has decided that each woman has a constitutional right to follow her own conscience. Now a bill in the Massachusetts House of Representatives is proposing that this right will be denied to women receiving Medicaid.

Representatives are saying that they have not heard from people opposed to this bill. This seems strange when polls report that 81 per cent of the American people believe women should have freedom of choice when faced by an unwanted pregnancy. Many assume the matter has been settled, but this is not so.

No one has ever suggested that any woman should be forced to have an abortion against her will. But this bill (H6327) would force a great many women to go through pregnancy and assume the care of a child when they feel unable to — simply because they are poor. Rich women would retain their constitutional rights.

Rep. Saltmarsh and Sen. Rotondi want to hear from us. Only the supporters of this bill are writing to them. If you are opposed to this

Swimming with class

By Karen Whittlesey-First

When I was a little kid, every one I knew could swim with varying degrees of skill and finesse. Some paddled along like your typical mutt with long floppy ears and others streaked like the Greyhound Bus dog. But somehow they all managed to make it from one side of the pool to the other and eventually from the diving board into the deep end — a feat which never failed to amaze me. Me the non-swimmer.

Now that I am a big kid, almost everyone I know can swim with varying degrees of skill and finesse. There's your typical macho heman whose bikini is just about all there. He swims to keep cool so that he can keep his cool at poolside or beach.

There's the matronly type in her skirted one-piece flowery stretch-nylon suit. She tends to dangle her toes and keep her hair dry.

Then there's the Girl from Ipanema. Enough said about her.

But my favorite summer-at-the-beach pastime is watching the kids. They don't give six grains of sand how they look or what they wear. They just do it!

They flop in belly first, but somehow never seem to get sore stomachs. They can hold their breath under water for as long as it takes me to walk to the ice cream truck, order a Bulldozer, change my order to a Double Whammy, and walk back to the blanket.

They stand on their heads waving their bronzed toes around until I'm sure they've planted themselves on the bottom upside down.

There's a game that kids all over the Boston area are playing. It's called Marco Polo but I haven't figured it out yet. It seems to be something like tag played in water up to your neck, with "it" yelling "Marco" and the others returning with "Polo" — all this with "it's" eyes closed. The point seems to be for "it" to locate the others using a sonar-like calling system.

And the stamina! Holy codfish! The kids gulp breakfast like the whale catching Jonah, slam the screen door on the way out, and show up for lunch sometime after 4 p.m. Then it's back to the beach again, "because we hardly had any time at all."

We're pretty lucky where we live. Wedge pond is a three-minute walk away. On a clear day in winter from the corner of our bathroom window you can see through the bare trees to one corner of it.

What's really lucky about having Wedge is the swimming lessons for kids. My six-year-old had the biggest news of his life to share this past week with everyone within long distance telephone range and short distance yelling range. He learned to swim!

You have to understand that at the beginning of July he was the kind of kid who wanted to swim but cheated. You probably did it the same way when you were little. You go out until the water is deep enough so your mother can't see the bottom but shallow enough so you can lie on top but your hands can touch bottom. Then you walk along on your hands, kicking behind, and every once in a while pretending to put your face in the water. It's easy and it fools people who don't know what you're up to.

Then something happened in July. He started the recreation department's swimming lessons for Beginning Boys. Through the bobs and jumps and breathing exercises, he plugged right along, not saying too much about it.

It looked pretty much like splashing — not that much different from the bathtub routine. Then last week he did it. He swam to the raft at the edge of the bathing area. More than that, he jumped back in from the raft and swam the return lap.

You should have seen him then. His face, with that little boy look, lit up the way it did when he found the kitten Christmas morning. Through the water dripping from his eyelashes, his big brown eyes twinkled like sunlight on the pond.

He had done the impossible. Like the first time he rode a two-wheeler.

I don't know what kind of style he'll use when he grows up. It may be like the floppy-eared mutt or it may be the sleek greyhound. Whatever it is, it will never be as beautiful as that first swim last week.

That was class.

Tennis treats anyone?

By Elizabeth Mahoney
Correspondent

Hot summer weather doesn't bother Linda Popp. An enthusiastic tennis player, she looks forward to outdoor play and vacation from her school year teaching duties.

She is also a cool cook in the kitchen and thoroughly enjoys contributing to poultuck monthly dinners for families of a mixed doubles group.

"We had about 20 people including children last Sunday," she said, "to attend an outdoor barbecue at our house. I used my refrigerator to make a pistachio pineapple pie." Other guests brought German chocolate cake, potato salad garnished with shrimp, a home-grown green garden salad and bean salad.

Linda's collection of quick and easy desserts and menus is notable. "When school starts I am busy and I look for recipes that are very easy," she said. "During the summer, I want to stay out of the kitchen and on the courts."

This fall she will be a reading specialist assigned to Vincent-Owen and Noonan schools. For seven years she was a fifth and sixth grade teacher at Washington School before she obtained a master's degree.

Linda brought the following desserts to recent tennis suppers.

Pistachio Pineapple Pie
9-inch graham cracker crust
1 container (9 oz.) Cool Whip brand topping
1 can (12 oz.) crushed pineapple, well drained

1 pkg. (3 oz.) instant pistachio nut pudding and pie filling.

Use homemade or commercial graham cracker crust. Mix pineapple that has been drained, Cool Whip topping, and dry pudding mix. Pour into pie crust and refrigerate overnight before serving. The cook notes that she served it outdoors during a very warm evening and the pie did not "melt." She does not recommend substituting regular whipped cream because the dessert may be too soft.

Lemon Bisque
1 pkg. (3 oz.) lemon Jello
1 cup boiling water
1 cup sugar
1 can evaporated milk (regular size)
graham cracker crumbs

Dissolve gelatin dessert and sugar in boiling water. Cool in refrigerator until slightly jellied. Pour evaporated milk into ice cube tray and partially freeze until ice crystals form around edges. Place in chilled mixing bowl and whip milk until stiff. Stir jello mixture into whipped evaporated milk. Pour into graham cracker crumb lined oblong pan. Top with reserved crumbs and freeze. Soften slightly before serving. Editor's note: dessert may be placed in a small spring form pan which has been lined with a crumb-butter mixture which has been flavored with a little cinnamon or ginger. Garnish with a lemon slice and a sprig of fresh mint.

Accomplishment

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I wanted to congratulate the town and the people responsible for employing young people this summer.

It is a pleasure to see efficient use of our environment by creating jobs for kids and helping to clean up Winchester's litter. Young people can now feel a sense of accomplishment for the community with the adults who made it possible for them.

Arlington youths arrested on country club grounds for cultivating marijuana plants

Three young Arlington horticulturalists were arrested by Winchester Police Saturday afternoon for cultivating what are believed to be marijuana plants in the woods near Winchester Country Club.

Residents in the Fox Hunt lane area spotted a parked car and called police around 2 p.m. Officers Thomas Faulkner and William Saraco responded and found two youths in the car. The two said they were waiting for friends who were in the woods by the edge of the golf course.

Faulkner and Saraco entered the woods and found three more youths, aged 16, 16 and 17, kneeling on the ground, planting and watering the plants. All three were arrested, charged with cultivating a controlled substance, and released to their parents.

Police arrested Mark Hodgson, 23, of Highland avenue Sunday and charged him with driving under the influence of alcohol, leaving the scene of an accident after causing damage, and possession of marijuana with intent to sell.

Hodgson allegedly was driving down Cross street when he ran into a parked car belonging to Police Chief John McHugh's son, Laurence F. McHugh, and fled down Loring avenue and pulled into a driveway. Officers James Pierce and Charles Culhane caught up with him there and checked out his license and registration.

When Hodgson opened the glove compartment to retrieve his license, the officers noticed several plastic bags there filled with pot.

Michael R. Holmes, 23, of Wakefield, was arrested early Sunday morning and charged with breaking and entering in the night time, a felony. Holmes allegedly broke into the downstairs apartment of a two-family home on South Border road by forcing the front door.

The owner of the home discovered the activity and notified the police. The woman who lived at the address was away. When contacted by police, said she knew the suspect and confirmed that he was not meant to have access to the house. The arrest was made by Officers Culhane and Pierce.

In another incident on Sunday two local youths were arrested for stealing a car on Rangeley road. Peter Greco, 20, of Blossom Hill road and Douglas Mehal, 19, of Oneida road were identified by neighbors across the street from where the car was stolen. The two explained they had thought the car they were driving belonged to a friend. The car was recovered in the parking lot by Trefrey Realtors. Again the arrests were made by Pierce and Culhane.

John Piantadosi Jr., 23, of Olde Village drive, was apprehended Saturday afternoon and charged with malicious damage to property (a felony).

Apparently a woman driving down the street ran over and killed Piantadosi's dog. He in turn ran out and shouted at the woman, who stopped at first, then drove into her own driveway nearby.

Obviously quite upset, Piantadosi smashed the car windshield with his hand and dented the hood of another car in the driveway. The police were called, and Piantadosi was arrested.

A 17-year-old Somerville youth was cited for driving to endanger after a close call on Main street near Richardson street last Wednesday.

The youth was driving south on Main street when a truck began to pull out of the Dairy Barn. Apparently trying to beat the light at the nearby intersection, the youth dashed through, swerved to avoid the truck, spun around and struck a telephone pole on the northbound side of the street. He and four passengers in the car were shaken up but unhurt.

A break-in was reported on Church street while a resident was away, between July 12 and 18. Silverware and jewelry were taken and the bedrooms ransacked, according to police. Entry was apparently gained by prying open a rear door.

Leonard catches McDonald in Rec baseball league

Fine pitching and timely hitting by the Leonard Field A team helped stop McDonald's winning streak.

Len Bellino pitched six innings as well as knocked in three runs with a homerun and a triple. Tom Wilsack came through with a sensational catch in the fourth inning and he homered in the six-run sixth inning. The game was to be continued yesterday.

For the second game in the past week, Leonard "A" team traveled to the high school to square off against Ginn Field. The game was temporarily delayed due to the heat and the lack of players. When the game began, Leonard had eight players and Ginn had seven plus one from Leonard.

John Boyle, a Leonard veteran, sacrificed is pride and played for Ginn. Dave Errico was the starter for Leonard and rookie Joey Waite came on in relief. The final score of 11-2 is not indicative of the hitting by Leonard but of the control problem of the Ginn pitchers. The heat finally got to both teams by the fourth inning as the game slowed. This week Leonard faces Westside and rival McDonald.

"B" Team

The Leonard "B" Team fought hard to stop the experienced McDonald Team with Coach Pam Giarizzo at the reigns but they fell short when McDonald exploded in the late innings to come back from a considerable deficit.

Pitcher Scott McAdams held off the McDonald attack for the first four innings before he was relieved by Jim Waite. Robbie Mistrretta, D.C. McGee and John Boyle kept Leonard on top for most of the game with above average hitting.

McDonald Field

The MacDonald Twins remained atop of the pack winning 3 games by forfeit, 2 from West Side and 1 from Ginn, and tying Leonard 6-6 upping their record to 5-0-1. The tie game will be played off next week.

In that tie contest McDonald jumped to an early 6 run lead. "Binky" Bradley, two hits, two walks; Eddie Pratt, three walks; Dave Vozzella, two hits, one walk; Jimmy Gibbons, two hits; and Mark Steranka, two hits, led the attack and provided a strong defense behind the superb pitching of Paul Marshall. He pitched 5 innings of shutout baseball, allowing just one hit.

However, Marshall tried in the sixth and Lenny Bellino and Steve Wolfe jumped on him for extra base hits and Leonard scored four times. Eddie Pratt relieved Marshall and finally ended the disastrous inning, but not before Leonard scored twice more to even the score.

Brush fires in Fells keep firemen busy

A rash of brush fires, including one series of blazes in the Middlesex Fells which kept firefighters busy for 16 hours one day, plagued Winchester over the past week.

On Sunday morning around 8:30 fire apparatus responded to several fires at different locations in the Fells. By the middle of the afternoon, the Winchester firemen called for help from the MDC, but the MDC crews were already tied up at a fire in Medford. Finally three trucks from the department of natural resources were called in to help douse the fires. The final recall came at 12:20 a.m. Monday.

There were more than a dozen other calls for brush fires in the past week, including at least six calls for fires in the Fells. Two engines had to respond to many of the alarms, and twice Winchester called in other towns to cover — once each to Woburn and Stoneham.

Other brush fires occurred on Amberwood drive on Saturday and Sunday; Ridge street (Sunday); Old Village drive (Sunday); Lockeland and High street (Sunday); Pond street (also on Sunday); Sylvester avenue (Tuesday); and Walker terrace (last Monday).

Firemen spent nearly four hours fighting fires at the transfer station early Monday morning. Responding to Box 3512, they found two compactor-trailers, a dumpster, and a leaf pile on fire. The rescue truck arrived shortly after 4 a.m. to provide light to the area, and an hour later Engine 1 joined Engine 2 at the scene. Recall was at 7:40 a.m. Engine 2 returned at 9:45 to wet down one of the dumpsters.

Other calls included an accidental alarm on July 8, set off by lightning on Ledgewood road; a car fire at the end of River street (the car, apparently abandoned, was totally engulfed in flames); a stove fire on Wendell street July 21; a minor car accident the same evening; and a call for arcing wires on Lockeland road on Sunday. An engine stood by until Edison could send men to repair the damage.

Tonaszuck presents ideas for center beautification

DPW Director Walter J. Tonaszuck presented selectmen with a number of ideas for beautification of Winchester center, some of which have already started. Among his projects are installation of additional benches, sandblasting of graffiti, and placing of more permanent litter baskets downtown.

Tonaszuck suggested:

- Maintaining an aggressive sidewalk program. Repairing sidewalks has already begun on Thompson street because of a serious safety problem there, he said. "Extensive changes should come out of the Winchester Center Study Committee and the town meeting," he added. Putting down brick sidewalk, one suggestion, would cost about $45 a square yard, while installed concrete runs about $5 a square yard. Tonaszuck said he was also looking into other kinds of sidewalk installation.

- Resurfacing the rotary. This would improve drainage and esthetics in the immediate center.

- Installing litter baskets downtown. Tonaszuck wants to put in a sturdier receptacle than the wire baskets there now. He suggested a type which bolts into the sidewalk and includes advertising around the sides. The advertising would pay for the containers, he said.

LaFrance baby

Mr. and Mrs. Edmond P. LaFrance (Susan Auferio) of 131 Ridge st. are the parents of their second child, Stephen Andre. Born July 14 at Winchester Hospital, Stephen is the couple's second son. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Pasquale R. Auferio of Somerville and Mr. and Mrs. Armand J. LaFrance of Medford.

Scott baby

A son, Dana William, was born to Debby and Harry Scott, Jr., of Lexington on June 1 at Emerson Hospital. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. John L. Andrews of Bedford and Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Scott of Winchester.

- Painting crosswalks. Tonaszuck is looking into a new non-skid paint for crosswalks which would provide better safety for pedestrians, especially in wet weather.

- Sandblasting graffiti from town property. The sandblaster has been brought out of storage and CETA employees will be making an effort to eliminate graffiti from the Town Hall, the library, and the train station and other places which have been defaced by graffiti. A suggestion from the audience was made that there is a chemical available which, when applied to the cleaned wall surface, helps to make future clean-ups easier. Tonaszuck said he was aware of the material but that the cost was prohibitive.

- Introducing green areas. Tonaszuck is thinking particularly of the island in front of the post office, which, he says, is large enough to support some flowers.

- Adding benches in the downtown area. One place in need of resting spots, according to Tonaszuck, is along the banks of the Mill Pond. He said that people have been sitting on the banks and causing erosion. He would like to see benches strategically placed to discourage people from causing further erosion. Other places in need of benches are along the bikeway and behind the senior center at Judkins Pond. He suggested benches of concrete like those at the high school.

- Improving lighting. Tonaszuck suggested installation of street lighting along the Mill Pond for pedestrian safety at night and to discourage groups of young people from gathering there in the dark. His original idea was to put in eight-foot high pedestal lights and he said he would check with the Edison company about cost and installation.

- Planting trees along sidewalks. The only way to plant new trees along the sidewalks downtown, Tonaszuck said, would be to give up some parking spaces. The sidewalks at this time are not wide enough to support trees.

The town's engineer, Jake Garcia also attended the selectmen's meeting to talk about improvements to the center. He said, "Parking is not a problem right now. There is enough parking downtown unless it's during the winter holiday season or just before school. I think the problem is that Winchester may be over-zoned for business. In any case we should start beautification of the center with the merchants themselves."

Tonaszuck has started some of the projects and hopes to begin work on the others soon. He had been charged by selectmen to come up with some plans for immediate beautification of the center which would not cost additional money and which could begin without waiting for the report of the center study committee at the fall town meeting.

The report of the center study committee should be available for selectmen's review early in September, according to committee chairman Sam Perkins who addressed the board briefly Monday. When that report is completed his committee and the selectmen will meet jointly to go over the suggestions. The committee, formed by town meeting, is to look at several options for improving the center without making a recommendation themselves. The report will go back to this fall's annual town meeting and the members will vote on a proposal.

Selectmen will reconsider their vote to install direction signs to route 93 at the request of Peter Kennedy Tully and his neighbors on South Border road.

Among other topics discussed at their regular Monday night meeting, selectmen heard Tully deplore the recent vote of the board to install three signs in town pointing to South Border road as the means of getting onto route 93. Tully said, "It would be a step backwards after all the work we've done petitioning the MDC to patrol the road and to enforce the no-trucks rule, to have a series of signs leading more cars and trucks onto our road."

Tully was especially concerned that trucks would violate the posted restriction and travel the dangerously curving road any way. He also said the ice and snow danger in winter is very serious. "Last winter there was an accident in front of our house," he said. "By the time we notified the police and they responded, there had been five more accident victims."

Selectmen Chairman Barbara S. Hankins, who had originally voted in favor of the signs ("I know what it's like to be lost in a strange town") said, "After talking with you I have mixed feelings about not putting up the signs."

The board will reconsider their vote Monday night.

In other action, selectmen received notice of more appointments to the human resources study committee. Dr. Lawrence F. Quigley will represent the board of health. Other designees announced so far are Dr. Leonor Rich from the council on aging, Vincent O'Reilly from the finance committee, and Constance Papas from the school committee. Barbara Hankins is representing the selectmen.

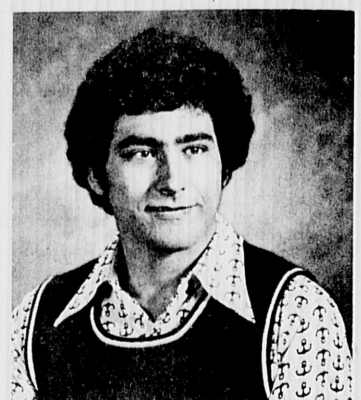

Selectmen, who have been meeting weekly through the summer, will hold another regular meeting Monday night.

By score of 6-3

Woburn tops national majors

The Winchester Little League's National Major All-Star team played the Woburn Central League team July 19, at Woburn's Forest Park and lost 6-3. Steven MacDonald pitched the whole game for Winchester, allowing only six hits and one walk.

Winchester took the lead in the top of the first when MacDonald hit a double and scored on Catcher Steven Costello's single. Woburn got that run back in the second and the game was tied at one until the bottom of the fourth when Woburn exploded for four unearned runs. With two out and two strikes the Woburn pitcher hit a blooper into the right field corner with the bases loaded, and four runs scored on the play. MacDonald struck out the next batter to end the inning, but Winchester was demoralized.

Down 6-1 in the sixth, Winchester began to battle back, but it proved to be too little too late. Tom Porell, Winchester first baseman, blasted a home run that had the crowd buzzing. The Home Run was a line drive that cleared the 200 foot fence by at least fifty feet, many considered it the longest home run they had seen by a little leaguer. Tom Lee followed with one of the two doubles he had on the day, and was driven home by Jimmy Coppins. Paul Carpenter followed with a walk, but the next batter grounded out to end the game.

Jimmy Feldmann sparked at shortstop for Winchester all game with several nice plays to help the cause. Chris Hoffman, Terrance O'Brien, Carpenter, and Jonas Bjornsgard played the rest of the infield capably for Winchester. Peter Terry, Robby MacDonald, Paul O'Brien, Danny Sullivan, Lee, and Coppins all played well in the outfield. Robby MacDonald, who singled, and Carpenter, who walked were among the seven men Winchester left on base. Woburn's ability to come up with the big play in important situations was the determining factor in the outcome.

Go for the wall contest Friday

The Winchester Recreation Department will hold its second "Go For The Wall" home run hitting contest this Friday at 10 a.m., West Side Field.

There are two different age groups: 9-12 and 13-16 years old. Players are asked to arrange themselves in groups of three, with a pitcher, catcher, and a batter.

A batter is allowed 15 pitches, of which he may swing at no more than 10. Points are awarded for a home run (10), off the wall (7), and hitting the fence on one bounce (5). Groups arranging themselves early will have a definite advantage by practicing together. However, if you come to the event without a group, you will be placed in one.

Registration may be made at any playground, the Sport Shop, or at the Recreation Department.

WBC Snipe sailors take top spots

With light winds prevailing on the Upper Mystic Lake, the Winchester Boat Club held their Snipe Invitational regatta July 9 and 10.

Some 40 boats, including out of state entries, registered for this weekend event, which was sponsored by Snipe Fleet 77 of Winchester. Jack Gannon, Fleet Captain.

Tom Legere of Arlington was awarded first prize. Second position went to Dick Towle and third place to Norm Towle, brother of Dick, all sailing out of the Winchester Boat Club.

Considering the competition from both Fleet 77 members and the visiting sailors, the winners and crews had to display their utmost skills to come out on top in this special regatta.

Husband-wife tennis August 13-14

The fifth annual Winchester Husband-Wife Tennis Tournament will be held during the weekend of August 13 and 14 "down at the Packer Courts." The Tournament will consist of a championship division and a consolation division for those who lose in the first round.

A highlight of the weekend is the traditional Saturday evening party which will include cocktails, a buffet dinner, and dancing.

Applications may be obtained from Whit Gray at the Packer Courts or at the Winchester Sport Shop and must be submitted by August 10.

All applicants must be Winchester residents.

Rain dates for the event are August 20 and 21.

Sudbury does it

Senior all-stars lose 10-4

The National Senior League All-Star team's hopes for reaching the finals of the district tournament were dashed July 20 at Peeley Field in Sudbury. The outcome was in doubt until the fifth inning, when Sudbury scored four runs to wrap up a convincing 10-4 victory.

Winchester opened up with three runs in the first inning when Sudbury starter Smith yielded shortstop Fran Murray's double between four walks. Sinker-ball relief pitcher Knight finally retired the All-Stars, and Sudbury bounced back to tie the score with five hits off Winchester starter Pat Costello, including a 300-foot double by third-baseman Frank Magnuson. Sudbury added two more runs in the second inning with two hits, three walks, and a Winchester error.

In the top of the third, Costello led off with a towering double to left field, moved to third on an infield out, and scored the fourth and final Winchester run when catcher Ned Fortin's sinking line drive to right was dropped by Gessner.

The end was clearly in sight for the all-stars when fireballer Magnuson relieved Knight and proceeded to strike out the next seven batters, while his mates collected a sixth run in the bottom of the fourth on three more base hits and an error, to make the score 6-4. A highlight of this inning was a diving catch by John Hennelly in deep center field that led to a double play. With a tiring Costello on the mound, the hosts added four more runs in the fifth inning on a pair of hits, including second-baseman Bob Carroll's fourth of the game, a walk, and another infield error.

Winchester's last bid for a rally came in the top of the sixth when Magnuson opened the inning by walking third-baseman John Wiseman, right-fielder Jeff Stackpole, and left-fielder Steve Dionne. However, Collin Green bounced back to the pitcher to set up a quick 1-2-3 double play to end the threat. Alan Christy relieved Costello in the bottom of the sixth and held Sudbury scoreless, but the all-stars could muster nothing in the seventh and the game ended with a 10-4 score.

The National Senior League All-Star team was managed by Brooke Green, who was assisted by Gerry Dionne, Van Williams, and Jim Wise.

American all-stars top Woburn, then fall to Wakefield pitching

by Jack Nolan

One would probably not expect a Little League all-star team to use the long ball as the nucleus of their offensive attack, but that's exactly what the Winchester American Major League All-Star team did one week ago last Tuesday night as they hit three home runs, two by Greg Kirk, and a grand slam by Tony Celli on their way to a gutsy 9-6 come back victory over the Woburn East All-Stars at Ginn Field.

However, things looked pretty dismal for Winchester during the early stages of this All-Star contest as Woburn East jumped off to an early 6-0 lead. After retiring the first two Woburn batters to face him in the top of the first, Winchester starter Brendan Minnehan ran into some trouble.

Woburn first baseman Brian Taylor singled up the middle and proceeded to advance to third on a wild pitch and a passed ball. Minnehan then loaded the bases by walking pitcher David Stack and hitting leftfielder Tony Flynn with a fastball. Rightfielder Jim Wackrow was next up and lined a shot down the left field line that just eluded the outstretched glove of a diving Greg Kirk and rolled past the wall in foul territory for a ground rule double, scoring two runs. Flynn was caught in a run-down at third to end the inning.

Winchester could do nothing with Stack in their half of the first and then things went from bad to worse for the home team in the second. With one out Woburn third baseman Linda Hayes (East coach Harry Nelson told me that she beat out 61 boys for her position) legged out an infield hit. Catcher Brian McDonald then placed a sacrifice bunt down the first base line which Minnehan proceeded to throw away for an error, and everyone was safe. Woburn shortstop Pignone singled to load the bases, and Hayes then stole home with the third Woburn run. Bill Califfin signed, driving in McDonald and both he and Pignone scored on wild Winchester pitches, to make it 6-0 Woburn at the end of 1 1/2.

Greg Kirk put Winchester on the board in their half of the second with a one out shot to rightcenter for his first homerun of the game. Neither team scored in the third and Minnehan set Woburn down in order in the top of the fourth. After Chuck Allard grounded out to lead off the home half of the fourth, catcher Mike Colozzi doubled to left. Kirk then stepped into the box and proceeded to hit a Ruthian blast over the wall in center for his second straight home run and the second and third Winchester runs of the ball game.

Minnehan, who had by now recovered from some early inning wildness, again set down the Easties in the top half of the fifth.

Bob Divenzo started off the Winchester fifth with a single and Brendan Minnehan followed with a walk. East coach Nelson had seen enough and immediately removed Stack and brought in Bill Clavin from center field to pitch. After giving up a single to Kevin Scully, loading the bases, Clavin retired the next two Winchester batters and it looked like he was going to work out of the jam. However, he walked the next batter, Mike Colozzi, forcing in a run and that brought up Kirk with the bases loaded.

Kirk broke his string of consecutive homers and hit what looked like the inning ending grounder to Woburn shortstop Pignone. Fortunately for the home team Pignone unwisely threw to the plate instead of to first and the throw was too late to nail Minnehan, who scored the fifth AL run. The mistake proved to be fatal. Tony Celli stepped into the box and hit a towering drive up the power alley in left for the game winning grand slam. After the game Winchester manager Kevin Floyd said of Celli's blast, "What a play! I went bananas!" Minnehan retired the side in order in the top of the sixth and the game belonged to Winchester ... almost.

A protest had been lodged by Woburn East coach Harry Nelson in the bottom of the fifth inning over the reinsertion of some of the Winchester starting lineup after they had been removed from the game.

During the regular season at the major league level of Little League ball, it is allowable for a manager to take out his starters during the course of the game and put them back in at a later time, thus making it easier to give all the members of the team a chance to play.

This rule is not in effect for tournament play. However, Winchester manager Kevin Floyd was under the impression that the rule was still in effect. Just to make sure Floyd sent his brother Gary over to check with the tournament director, Dr. Blanch. The Floys claim that Dr. Blanch gave them the go ahead to reinsert the starters.

Official scorer Rick Pearl, who was sitting next to Blanch at the time, told me that Dr. Blanch said that he was not sure, but to go ahead. Dr. Blanch himself told me after the game that he told Gary, "I don't know (if the starters could be reinserted) look it up in the rule book. As far as I can remember, you can."

So manager Floyd proceeded to remove his starters in the third inning and replace them with substitutes. Two innings later, he put all the starters back in the field. East coach Nelson did not notice the change until the bottom of the fifth inning, when Kevin Scully came to bat, the first of the reinstated starters to do so.

Nelson immediately came out to home plate umpire Dan Shine to tell him he was going to protest the game. A very long and large discussion ensued, because no one was quite sure what to do. Unfortunately no one at the game, not the coaches, umpires, nor the tournament director had a copy of the rule book for major league tournament play with him, which certainly didn't help matters.

The umpires finally decided that Nelson should protest the game and that play should continue. After the game district director George Berardi called the protest into Little League headquarters in Williamsport, Pennsylvania and was told by officials there that the protest was denied because the tournament director and the umpires didn't know the rule. NOW, the game officially belonged to Winchester.

Good pitching will stop good hitting. That's just about what happened to the Winchester American Major League All-Stars last Friday night in Wakefield where they were shutout 5-0.

Wakefield National starting pitcher Warren Sheehan stymied the Winchesterites by striking out 13 of the 19 batters he faced in the course of the ball game, including the first nine batters to step to the plate over the first three innings.

Winchester could only manage one hit off Mr. Sheehan, that being Kevin Scully's leadoff fourth inning ground single into rightfield. Mike Colozzi was the one Winchester player to get the ball out of the infield when he flied to center in the fourth, while Scott Nolan made what was by far the best contact of the day off Sheehan. With two out in the fifth, Nolan ripped a wicked line drive down the first base line for what looked like an easy double. However, Wakefield National first baseman Mike Magliozzi made a great play, knocking the ball down and then flipping to second baseman Ian Power for the putout.

Wakefield had better luck off Winchester starter and loser John Myers, who pitched a much better game than the score indicates. He struck out eight and gave up but two hits in the four-and-one-third innings he worked.

The Nationals got their first run off Myers in the first inning when, after striking out lead off batter Dana Encarnacho, he walked the next two batters, shortstop Mark Schille and Sheehan, bringing up Corey Daley, one of the biggest 12-year-olds this reporter has seen in quite some time.

Daley proceeded to lash a line drive into right field that never got much higher than five inches off the ground and skipped all the way to the fence, much the same way a speed boat skips across the sea, for a double. Only one run scored on the play as a beautiful Kirk-to-Myers-to-catcher-Collozzi relay from the outfield nailed Wakefield's Sheehan attempting to score from first base.

Wakefield did more damage to the Winchester cause in the third when Myers again walked Schille and Sheehan to set the stage for Daley. This time Corey hit a rocket to left that cleared the fence before leftfielder Greg Kirk (who had moved over from center at the start of the inning) even had a chance to move for a three-run homer.

Wakefield would score once more in the bottom of the fifth inning on the strength of two Myers hit batsmen and a run scoring single by Mike Magliozzi off Winchester relief pitcher Bob Giarrizzo to account for the final score of 5-0.

It was a very frustrating loss for the Americans, who literally had the bats taken out of their hands by the fine pitching of Warren Sheehan. But they have nothing to be ashamed of. The Winchester American Major League All-Star team played some fine baseball, both defensively and offensively, in the two ball games they were involved in. The fact of matter is, they were beaten by a better team.

Winning Farm donates funds for scholarships

Thanks to the Winning Farm for Children's Board of Directors, the Northeast and Minuteman Regional Vocational Schools will be receiving regular scholarship donations.

Northeast has already been receiving two $250 dividend checks a year from the organization; and the Minuteman Voke will start drawing from their account in June. The Winning Farm Directors recently presented Minuteman Superintendent Ronald J. Fitzgerald with a token check, representing the $4000 placed on account for the school by Winning Farm.

The money is to be used for scholarships for vocational school graduates.

Winning Farm, located on 100 acres of land where the Winchester, Woburn and Lexington town lines meet, is a non-profit corporation established in 1898 from the legacy of William Henry Willing. The farm provides summer camp programs for children from Boston and from the Woburn Boys' Club.

Much of the improvements at the farm over the years, including buildings and renovations on the older ones, have been carried out by volunteers from local social and fraternal organizations. Winchester Rotarians had a major hand in constructing a group of cabins at the site.

More than 8000 youngsters used the facilities at Winning Farm in a recent year, and the directors plan improvements to the farm to increase its capacity.

Since the Winning Home, Inc. is a charitable organization, it must spend what little income it has each year so that it won't be lost to taxes. Beginning in 1975, the home established scholarship funds for Woburn and Winchester graduates at Northeast Metropolitan Regional Vocational School and a similar fund for Lexington students at Minuteman Regional Vocational School.

In return, the two vocational schools have provided the home with assistance in various ways. Northeast students designed and printed a booklet for the home; in addition, students in the construction trades helped build new lavatory facilities in the main house. The Minuteman Voke has plans for its horticultural classes to beautify the entrance to the farm.

The board of directors of Winning Farm recently presented a $4000 check to the Minuteman Regional Vocational School in Lexington. The money is for scholarships for Minuteman students. At presentation are, from left, front row: Woburn Police Captain Leo McElhiney; Winchester Police Chief John P. McHugh; George L. Billman, treasurer of Winning Farm and the Winchester Cooperative Bank, presenting check; Superintendent of the Minuteman Voke Dr. Ronald J. Fitzgerald; and Lexington Police Chief James F. Corr; back row: Woburn DPW Superintendent Albert J. Wall; Winning Farm Executive Committee Chairman Charles A. Murphy; Asst. DPW Supt. Robert Simonds; Winning Farm President Thomas J. Martin III; and Woburn Building Inspector John L. Brophy.

Chaplin classics at library Aug. 5

Two classic Charlie Chaplin comedies, "The Gold Rush" and "Pay Day" will be shown August 5 in the meeting room of the Winchester Public Library at 3 p.m. and 7 p.m. Free tickets for the film performances are available at the adult circulation desk of the library.

In "Pay Day," Charlie, a poor construction worker with a domineering wife, falls hopelessly in love with the foreman's daughter.

"The Gold Rush" is described in a New York Times review as the outstanding gem of all Chaplin's pictures." Charlie plays the pathetic lone prospector in the Klondike. The film includes the hilarious scene in a cabin on a precipice in which a starving Charlie decides to make a meal out of his shoe

Transfer station expands its hours

Effective July 5, the Winchester Transfer Station will be open to all residents, Monday through Friday from 7 a.m.-8 p.m.; Saturday, 7 a.m.-12 noon.

Miss Stahler, Dana Cavanaugh wed in garden ceremony July 9

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Skillman Stahler of Macungie, Pennsylvania and Dr. E. John Stahler of Allentown, Pennsylvania.

The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cavanaugh of Winchester. Laura Jean Campbell of Ann Harbor, Michigan attended the bride, and Neal Patrick Cavanaugh of Granville, Ohio, served his brother as best man.

The bride's gown was of tucked cotton and hand crocheted lace and she carried a summer bouquet of blue cornflowers, daisies, delphinium and roses. Blue cornflowers were worn in her hair.

The newlywed couple, both graduates of Cornell University, will reside in Ithaca, New York.

Miss Hurlburt, Bruce Stebbins set Sept. date

Mrs. Newton Claypool Trowbridge of Hingham announces the engagement of her daughter, Jeannette Hurlburt, to Bruce Halcot Stebbins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Donald Stebbins of Winchester.

Miss Trowbridge, daughter also of the late Mr. Newton Claypool Trowbridge, is a graduate of Hingham High School and earned her bachelor of science degree in environmental conservation from the University of New Hampshire this past May.

Mr. Stebbins, a graduate of Winchester High School, received a bachelor of arts degree in English from American International College in Springfield, Mass. in 1974. He is the news and music director of radio station WSKI in Montpelier, Vt.

A September 10 wedding is planned.

Real Estate

by Ann Blackham

WHAT GOES WITH HOUSE?

Real estate is usually defined as the land and everything attached to it, such as: buildings, trees, shrubs, etc. The buyer normally gets all of the real estate, but none of the owner's personal property. The problem arises when personal property has become a part of the real estate. This is called a fixture and does pass with the real estate.

There are three usual test which must be satisfied. Has the personal property been permanently annexed to the real estate? Is it intended to become part of the real estate? And finally, what is the local custom? Usual fixtures

It is important that the seller spell out specifically in his sales agreement exactly what he intends to give to the buyer as part of real estate. This will save misunderstanding at the closing and sometimes save a sale.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at ANN BLACKHAM & CO., 11 Thompson St., Winchester. Phone 729-1863. We're here to help!
